Guards Won't Walk Out

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — British Columbia Penitentiary guards voted Tuesday night to go along with their national executive and remain at work.

Although some members urged walking off the job, the majority agreed to await a reply from Andre Therrien, commissioner of penitentiaries, to 12 demands made by the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

Therrien has until Oct. 17 to reply to the demands.

The guards at the B.C. Penitentiary have expressed outrage at the agreement negotiated by prison authorities and prisoners to end the four-day siege and release a guard hostage during a riot resulting in $1.5 million damage last week at the maximum-security institution.

John Lakusta, president of the New Westminster local of the union which covers the prison, had warned of possible mass resignations by guards.

Union officials have called on the Canadian Penitentiary Service to renege on the negotiated agreement, saying it consolidates prisoners control of the prison, but officials in Ottawa and Vancouver have refused.

Spokesmen for federal prison guards in Ottawa said they believe a criminal conspiracy exists to destroy all penitentiaries in Canada.

They said the destruction of a 280-cell wing of Laval maximum-security prison north of Montreal has left the federal system with no cells in the Province of Quebec.

The simultaneous destruction of a wing of the B.C. penitentiary had forced authorities to transfer some prisoners from there to minimum-security prisons because of lack of other space.

Paul Gascon, executive director of the union that represents 7,000 prison employees, including 3,500 guards, said the guards, the penitentiaries service and the RCMP are aware that "or-

Thai Army Coup In Wake of Riot

Times News Services

BANGKOK — Thailand's military seized power today following a student-police battle which killed at least 12 persons, ending a three-year experiment in democracy with political arrests and a declaration of martial law.

Leaders of the coup dissolved Thailand's cabinet and parliament and abolished the constitution.

All newspapers were closed and police teams swept through newsrooms collecting "subversive" literature.

Admiral Sangad Chaloryoo, a former defence minister and supreme commander of the armed forces, placed himself in charge of the new administration and pledged "we will do everything ... to maintain the king, the throne, the country, democracy."

"All power and control will be in the hands of Admiral Sangad," another communique said.

One U.S. official in Bangkok said the United States would work toward good relations with the new regime, who said in an official announcement they will continue the foreign policy of the Seni administration.

"We don't feel it is our business to say what sort of government Thailand should have," the official said.

The takeover came eight hours after a bloody battle between leftist students and a rightist mob at Thammasat University in the heart of Bangkok.

The confrontation, touched off by the return to Thailand of exiled former military dictator Thanom Kittickachorn, erupted in a gunfight between students and police, who attacked with handguns, rifles and grenades.

Official police figures said 12 persons were killed and 180 injured, but unofficial estimates said at least three dozen persons died and hundreds were wounded.

The rightists, part of a mob of 10,000 that shouted "kill them all!" ripped one wounded student from the hands of police and beat him to death with their fists, feet and rifle butts.

Another student was hanged from a tree and at least five others were burned to death.

At least 700 students surrendered to police.

Bangkok was outwardly calm after Radio Thailand announced the coup following its regular 7 p.m. newscast.

LAUGHING GAS THEFT NO JOKE: POLICE

VANCOUVER (AP) — Police expressed concern Tuesday over the theft of 38 cylinders of nitrous oxide — commonly known as laughing gas — valued at $1,363 from a Union Carbide Canada Ltd. plant.

Because of the large quantity stolen, Vancouver police said there is a possibility the gas could be used in the execution of crime.

The 144 pounds of gas in the cylinder would expand to about 10,000 gallons under normal atmospheric pressure. The gas is sweet-smelling and colorless and if large doses are inhaled unconsciousness and even death could occur.

Union Carbide told police it did not sell nitrous oxide to private persons, only to hospitals, doctors and dentists where it is used in small quantities as an anaesthetic. It also can be used as a meat preservative. The slaughter houses must secure a licence to procure it.

Anti-Protest Ads Sabotage Suspected

Sabotage is suspected in the mysterious disappearance of some advertisements attacking labor's day of protest Oct. 14.

The ads from the 37,000-member Canadian Federation of Independent Business were sent out last Thursday to 20 Canadian daily newspapers but 14 of the papers didn't receive them.

"There is some kind of sabotage in the system," federation president John Bulloch said today from Toronto.

He said the ads, which describe the protest as "a sad day for democracy, an even sadder day for Canada," were sent out along with other material and only the anti-Oct. 14 material went missing.

Bulloch said he may hold a news conference Thursday to publicize the missing ads if the federation is able to find proof that they were deliberately misplaced.

The ads were prepared by the Toronto advertising firm of Brian Skinner Communications Ltd. and sent out by H and S Reliance, an engraving house.

Skinner said today the ads, which were sent to but apparenly not received at either the Times or Colonist, were hand delivered to Toronto daily papers and appeared today in the Globe and Mail and Toronto Star.

He said other material sent at the same time related to the federal anti-inflation board, Canada Savings Bonds and Tip Top Tailors arrived at the newspapers but the federation ads didn't.

"We suspect industrial sabotage," he said.

New ads were sent out Tuesday night, he said. The originals were mailed Thursday and should have arrived by Saturday at the latest, he added.

The federation advertisement shows the Canadian flag flying at half-mast against a black background and appeals to Canadians to go to work as usual Oct. 14.

"Are we to be governed by law or by the wishes of a few union leaders," the ad asks. "The vote will be counted Oct. 14."

Bulloch, who said it cost $35,000 to circulate the ad, accused labor leaders of using "big-lie techniques" to protest their cause.

Bulloch said the majority of Canadians support the federal wage and price controls.

He said the federation recently completed a survey of the federation's members which showed that 60 per cent of the companies favor the controls, 37 per cent are against and three per cent are uncommitted.

He said 36,000 companies were polled and 8,000 ballots returned.

QUAKE KILLS SIX

QUITO (Reuter) — Thousands of villagers in central Ecuador spent the night in the streets after a string of earth tremors killed at least six people.

In the past 24 hours 28 tremors have been recorded in the region. Some measured five or six on the 12-point Mercalli scale.

Officials said six bodies had been found in the districts of Pasto Calle and Toacaso in the southern province of Cotopaxi, about 50 miles from here.

They said about 90 per cent of the houses in both districts had been destroyed and rescue teams were digging through the debris for more victims.

Most of the tremors occured during the day when most people were working in the fields.

In Yugoslavia, three earth tremors shook the Vlandovo area Tuesday night but caused no casualties or damage, seismologists said today.

Postal Strikes Spread As Injunction Sought

Times News Service

Members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) expanded their series of illegal work stoppages over technological change late Tuesday by walking out in both St. John's, Nfld., and London, Ont.

The move by the inside postal workers followed two 24-hour wildcat walkouts and was the first time in this round of disruptions CUPW members went on strike at two post offices the same day.

Also late Tuesday, national union officials in Ottawa were served with a legal writ barring them from taking part in any illegal work stoppages.

Joe Davidson, president of the 23,000-member union, declined comment about the writs, saying: "I'm the wrong man to ask about anything. . .

Our benevolent employer has served us with papers."

The writs prevent the union executive from co-ordinating the job action by the 23,000 members.

In Vancouver, a judge of the British Columbia Supreme Court adjourned until today a hearing on a federal application for an interim injunction against picketing by the CUPW local.

Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais, who met with union leaders in Ottawa Tuesday, had warned CUPW earlier that the government intended to seek the injunction to prevent further walkouts there.

CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot said the Ottawa meeting was held "to clarify the situation" about the contentious technological change clause in the current collective agreement.

"The postmaster-general is a new postmaster-general and he was given wrong information from both sides. . . . There was a need for some clarification," Mr. Parrot said.

He said, however, that no further meetings were scheduled and the walkouts were continuing.

The latest bout of post office trouble in the long-standing dispute erupted Friday when union leaders issued a strike call to CUPW workers after walking out of a meeting with top post-office officials. The meeting had been a last-ditch attempt to iron out the problem of technological change.

Fund Crisis Hits UVic Music Dept.

A funding crisis that threatens the future of the University of Victoria's music department will be aired tonight by UVic president Dr. Howard Petch.

Dr. Petch will outline the situation — which a university spokesman says has triggered "tremendous concern" within the department — at a senate meeting.

UVic officials have been told that the Universities Council of B.C., the government-appointed body that distributes funds to B.C. public universities, has recommended that UVic receive a minor amount of funds compared to B.C.'s two other public universities.

The government money was to have been spent at UVic on construction of a new music building.

UVic authorities had given the building a top priority classification because of overcrowding in the music department.

Unless the Universities Council can be persuaded to re-allocate the funding, UVic officials fear that some of the music department's faculty might leave for other posts.

Polyestermite Isn't Right; We're Victims of a Hoax

Own a fiberglass boat?

Worried about that dreaded marine organism called polyestermite?

You can breathe easy.

It turns out that news stories which appeared in early October in newspapers all across North America — last Friday's Times included — stating that polyestermites eat fiberglass, were unfounded.

And (shudder) it appears that the whole thing was a dreadful but cunning hoax.

Phones at the Times have been jangling since the article appeared. Everybody and his uncle out there who owns a fiberglass boat was justifiably concerned that the polyestermite would gobble up their floating real estate.

The whole thing started in Sail, circulation 150,000, and considered one of North America's best and most reputable boating magazines.

Sail carried a detailed and lengthy article under a staff writer byline outlining the growth of the polyestermite and its ability to consume fiberglass.

The story was picked up by newspapers and other media, triggering an avalanche of calls.

Local physician Dr. Hugh Macartney alerted the Times that the whole thing was a hoax, the polystermite having been an invention of British yachtsman Bill Beavis in 1970.

"The original was a classic British leg-pull," the doctor reported. "The polyestermite had nippers on each end so he could simultaneously eat two boats rafted together."

Beavis owns up to his invention in the February edition of the British magazine, Yachting Monthly.

"Every now and then over the past six years this Frankenstein thing comes back to haunt me," he writes.

Patience Wales, Sail's managing editor in Boston, admitted Tuesday she has been submerged with calls from anxious boaters and boat dealers.

While not going into detail (the impression was the magazine had been conned), she said there would be an explanation in a future issue.

But for those subscribers of Sail in Canada, the United States and overseas who have no other way of checking, it will be a long wait.

Wales said the explanation will be too late to make the November issue but will appear in December.

In any event, it appears that fiberglass boats are A-OK.

At this stage of the game, we're just sorry we ever heard of the pesky bug, polyestermite.

So would you please stop tugging us?

Kepone Polluter Fined $13.2M

Times News Services

RICHMOND, Va.—A judge, who said he wanted to deliver a warning to every corporation in the U.S., Tuesday fined the Allied Chemical Corp. $13.2 million for secretly discharging Kepone and other chemical wastes into Virginia's James River.

"I hope that after this sentencing every corporate officer will think 'if I don't do anything (about pollution) I will be out of a job," Judge Robert Merhige said in setting the maximum fine allowed by the law.

No "commercial products are as important as our environment."

In imposing the fine, believed to be the largest ever levied in a federal pollution case, Merhige noted a federal rule that allows him to change the sentence later. He might lift part of the Allied fine if the corporation makes any "voluntary" effort to alleviate any of the suffering that has resulted from the contamination of the lower James River with Kepone, he said.

Just hours before sentencing Allied, Merhige imposed a fine of $3.8 million on the tiny, defunct Life Science Products Co., which took over Kepone production for Allied in 1974 and made the white powdery pesticide for 18 months.

Russell Train, director of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said "the large criminal fine . . . represents a landmark decision in the history of environmental protection.

"The court has clearly signalled that polluters will be held accountable to the full extent of the law," he said.

Contamination from Kepone has forced a fishing ban on the James River and now threatens the Chesapeake Bay, the biggest fish producer on the east coast.

About 30 chemical workers who were employed by the now defunct Hopewell, firm that produced Kepone exclusively for Allied have been hospitalized with nervous disorders diagnosed as Kepone poisoning.

Exotic Animals Saved, City Men Buy Island

SPIEDEN ISLAND, Wash. (AP) — Since three Victorians purchased this 535-acre San Juan Island, cameras and not guns are used to hunt the unique, exotic animals.

In an effort to preserve animal species such as Kika, Axis and Fallow deer, Corsican and Moufon sheep and Spanish goats, George Stricker, Frank Krieger and Doug Garland purchased the island from the U.S. owners three years ago.

It was once known as Safari Island and a haven for hunters, but the preservation by the new owners has proved costly and the partners are looking for up to 20 more investors.

Stricker says there will be no tourist development on the island and it definitely will not be subdivided.

He said at best the investors might each build a cabin on the island for their own use.

And as it stands now, people wanting to photograph the exotic animals can do so with permission from the owners.

The Canadians have posted "No Hunting" signs and guests shoot animals only with cameras.

Spieden gained national attention a few years ago when a network news report focused on the "fishbowl" hunting where animals were stalked in the open without a chance of escape. Hunters came in by airplane, landed on the island's grassy runway and were entertained in a rustic lodge.

The preserve was operated by a group of businessmen headed by Gene and Chris Klineberger of Jonas Brother Outdoor World, a Seattle sporting goods company, for three years until bought out by the Victoria trio.

Chris Klineberger maintained that financial troubles and bad publicity had no effect on the group's decision to sell, and that safari-like hunting was never large-scale.

However, as part of a legislative inquiry, Washington State Sen. Lowell Peterson toured Safari Island in 1973. He said the investigation was into the objectionable aspect of semi-domesticated animals being hunted with no chance of escape, and the possibility of stray bullets injuring residents of neighboring islands.

"I suspect that had they continued, it would have brought legislative action of some sort," Peterson said.

Guards To Stay On Job

ganized groups are out to destroy the system."

The simultaneous riots at Laval and British Columbia penitentiaries were "more than a coincidence," added Andy Stewart, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada. He said a communications network exists among the prisons and added that it was "not impossible" that, because of the make-up of citizen's committees negotiating with the prisoners, members were part of the network.

Neither he nor Gascon could give any facts to back up their contentionn that is a conspiracy. Gascon said copies of Transition Magazine, advocating riots, had been allowed in the prison system for a time even though the magazine was banned on public newstands.

Dr. Scott Wallace, B.C. Conservative leader and a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee, which took part in negotiations last week, expressed dismay at comments from union leaders in Ottawa Tuesday that the committee had conspired with prisoners to produce the riot.

He said that comments from guards that the committee is "functioning as a committee to aid inmates is unfair and inaccurate and is likely to make the actual future of the committee questionable."

JETFOIL RESPONSE EXCELLENT SO FAR

The Boeing jetfoil is nearly halfway through its 46-day experimental daily run between Seattle and Victoria, and the public response remains "excellent", Georgian Gulf Cruises president James Byrn said today.

But the company will not make any decisions on purchasing a jetfoil and operating the run on a full time basis until January, he said.

The $7.5 milion jetfoil has been loaned by Boeing for the short-term daily run. It has been averaging between 210 and 220 passengers every trip, Byrn said. Capacity is 224.

"We still don't know how much is a novelty factor," he said, and added that 25 per cent of the passengers to date have been connected with the Boeing company.

Public response through a questionnaire has also been excellent, Byrn said. All are pleased and most said they would make the trip again.

"I'm enjoying it. We wouldn't have started this if we didn't think there was a possibility of going further," he said.

It would be at least a year before service could begin even if Georgian Gulf decides to make the purchase.

The Seattle aircraft company has a year's backlog on orders for its jetfoil.

Running on gas turbine engines, the Flying Princess cruises at 50 m.p.h. and makes the 84-mile trip to Seattle in about one hour and 50 minutes.

So far this fall, two trips had to be cancelled due to heavy fog in late September.

Right-Wing Rampage

$30,000 IN POP DOWN THE DRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — The complete stock of soft drinks at all Pop Shoppe stores in Manitoba will be dumped into the sewer this week, because a routine check uncovered pop "not up to standard," Winnipeg manager Glen Torgerson said today.

He said the problems posed no danger to customers' health and there have been no complaints from consumers. The firm has been assured by the federal department of health that the sub-standard pop was "not dangerous from a health standpoint."

Torgerson said 15,000 cases, with a wholesale value of about $30,000, will be discarded because of problems that include incorrect syrup additions, poor carbonization levels and foreign material in the bottles.

The stock will be dumped at all eight stores in Winnipeg and at stores in nine other Manitoba communities — Portage la Prairie, Dauphin, Carman, Winkler, Steinbach, Beausejour, Lac du Bonnet, Gimli and Stonewall. The bottling and mixing for Pop Shoppe products sold in Manitoba is done in Winnipeg.

Plan Wins Support

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Rhodesia's principal tribal leaders announced Tuesday their support for the Anglo-American settlement plan which would bring about black marjority rule in the country within two years.

The Rhodesian council of chiefs was briefed on the plan by deputy Internal Affairs Minister Wilfred Walker at a meeting at Seki, south of Salisbury.

It was not yet known if Rhodesian tribal leaders would attend a conference which Britain plans to convene soon to establish an interim government in Rhodesia.

Chinese N-Blast Fallout in U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Chinese nuclear blast has dropped radioactive fallout on parts of the United States, particularly eastern Pennsylvania, but federal agencies said Tuesday the amounts that have reached the ground "do not present any risk to public health."

"Thus far, the fallout appears to be no more than one per cent of the level at which Environmental Protection Agency guidelines recommend that some precautionary action be taken," the EPA and the U.S. energy research and development administration said in a joint statement.

Information available late Tuesday "does not indicate, nor is expected to indicate, a public health hazard of any dimension," the statement added.

(In Ottawa, a health department spokesman said that no detectable level of fallout has been found in Canada since the Chinese test and there is no cause for concern. He said monitoring stations have found that Chinese blasts in recent years have produced lower levels of fallout than nuclear tests by the Soviet Union and the U.S. in previous years.)

China announced the explosion on Sept. 26, saying it was a response to the call of its Communist party to turn "grief into strength" following the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung two weeks earlier.

Carried by winds, a contaminated air mass of unknown size moved eastward across the Pacific Ocean and was detected over British Columbia andthe Pacific Northwest on Oct. 1 or 2.

Then winds carried the radioactive air mass over southern Canada and the Atlantic—except for a portion that got caught in a low-pressure area over Illinois and Ohio and was dissipated over a huge area possibly ranging from Mississippi to Maine.

Temperatures plummeted Tuesday in response to the cool wet mass of air. Stations inn southeastern B.C. recorded near record low maximums. Revelstoke attained a high of only 8 degrees which tied a record established back in 1954. Rising pressure over southern B.C. has succeeded in pushing the next disturbance further north. Rain has already spread over most of the northern coast this morning and the same system will overwhelm the central interior with showers this afternoon. This sequence of events will allow an improving trend over the southern regions. The major obstacle seems to be a mass of low level moisture trapped in the channels and valleys. Slow drying of the air mass at low levels will occur and Thursday should be a predominantly sunny day over southern B.C.

SAILOR ENDS 4½-YEAR SAGA

BRISBANE (UPI) — Englishman Shane Acton sailed into Brisbane harbor today ending a 4½-year, 15,000-mile voyage from England in his 18-foot sailing boat, Super Shrimp.

The wooden vessel was believed to be the smallest craft ever to accomplish the hazardous voyage. The boat had no engine and only light rigging for its sails.

Acton, 30 an ex-Royal Marine from Cambridge, was accompanied on the last leg of the 15,000-mile voyage by a 29-year-old Swiss woman, Iris Derungs, whom he said hitched a ride to Australia from Panama.

Acton told newsmen when he left England in April, 1972, he intended the sail to be solo.

Miss Derungs said, "I fell in love with Shane's Super Shrimp when I saw it passing through te Panama Canal in 1974. I asked him for a passage to Australia."

"Iris and I have no plans to marry," Acton said, "but we admit it was impossible to remain just companions on a voyage from Panama to Australia in such a small boat."

The pair, looking fit and tanned, said they had subsisted on a diet of eggs, potatoes, onions, rice and spaghetti.

Acton said the only hazard they encountered on the voyage from Panama was from whales and their powerful watersouts which could have capsized the small craft if directed at the keel of the boat.

Premier Denies Soviet Threat

He denied the Soviet Union is threatening anyone and repeated Kremlin positions that his country is "ready to reduce armed forces on a reciprocal basis." (See Soviet arms spending report on Page 10.)

He did not name the Western countries he said are undermining detente.

"Some circles in Western countries persistently spread allegations about a Soviet menace and are speculating on the fear which they themselves assiduously arouse," he sad.

Brezhnev spoke in an interview with French television from his study in the Kremlin. The interview was also broadcast in Moscow and a transcript was carried by the Soviet news agency Tass.

He said the need to halt the arms buildup has become urgent and spoke out against those in the West who insist the United States must be the strongest military power in the world.

The 69-year-old Soviet Communist party leader said:

"The Soviet Union has impressive armed forces indeed; but we declare clearly that the Soviet Union has never threatened and is not threatening anyone and is ready any time to reduce armed forces on a reciprocal basis.

"We have to perfect our defences; have to, I repeat, since we are faced with the arms race. Voices sound now and again that NATO's leading power (the U.S.) must be the strongest one in the world, that NATO as a whole must be building up armaments and thus exerting constant pressure on the Soviet Union and other Socialist countries."

If other countries were really concerned about the growth of Soviet weaponry, he said, they would work in earnest to reduce armaments.

The Soviet Union has long accused the West of dragging its feet in strategic and conventional force disarmament talks, while the West claims the Soviets are seeking one-sided advantages.

Officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have recently expressed concern over what they say is a wide-ranging Soviet weapons build-up on land and sea.

Brezhnev also criticized assertions that the Soviet bloc benefits most from detente.

"Those who believe that we, more than others, need contacts and exchanges in the economy, science and technology are mistaken."

Leyland Threatens Shutdown

LONDON (Reuter) — Startled union leaders at British Leyland Motor Corp. discussed today a management warning that two key factories might be closed and 100,000 employees dismissed unless the work force pledges itself to greater productivity.

In a surprise announcement Tuesday night, Leyland managing director Derek Whittaker said the unions had until 3 p.m. Thursday to make up their minds.

Whittaker said that unless a new productivity deal is agreed by then, the company would be unable to secure state funds from the government's National Enterprise Board for investment in a new model of Leyland's big-selling Mini car.

Without such investment, the Mini project would collapse and production would stop on other models such as the Allegro and Marina, Whittaker said. This would mean shutting down Leyland's Longbridge factory in Birmingham and its Cowley plant at Oxford, with a consequent loss of 100,000 jobs.

Union leaders reacted angrily. "Such a closure would create an economic desert," said Brian Mathers, regional secretary for the Transport and General Workers' Union.

Eddie McGarry, joint chairman of Leyland's shop stewards committee, said the management statement is stupid and premature.

The enterprise board, due to meet Friday to discuss further investment in Leyland, seemed to take a cooler view of the situation. "There is no question of an ultimatum," a board spokesman said. "But clearly the Mini project cannot be considered on Friday unless commitments have been made by management and work force."

Board sources indicated that even if agreement is not reached by Friday, the project could be considered later.

Leyland's manufacturing director, Richard Perry, said: "We are not asking anybody to work like racehorses. We are just asking people to work as our competition does because if we don't, we are not going to get the competitive edge we need."

Jobless-Vacancy Link Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — Provinces with the highest rates of unemployment also are poorest in the number of job vacancies, according to calculations based on government figures.

The unofficial calculations, based on Statistics Canada surveys, show wide disparities between high-unemployment provinces such as Newfoundland and Nova Scotia and low-unemployment provinces such as Alberta and Saskatchewan.

In Newfoundland during August, for example, there were about 27 jobless persons for every available job while in Alberta there was one job for every two persons without work. Newfoundland's jobless rate was 1.9 per cent while Alberta's was four per cent.

While government officials caution that jobless and job vacancy totals are not directly comparable, they do provide another indication of which provinces and regions are job poor.

Across Canada during the three-month period ending Aug. 31, there was an average part-time and casual jobs, according to a Statistics Canada which acount for 9 per cent of employment.

For every 1,000 existing jobs there were seven vacancies nationally. During August, there were also 709,000 unemployed in the country or 11 jobless for every single vacancy.

This year has so far been the worst for job vacancies since 1971. To the end of August, the average number of vacancies had been about 5, at any point in time, a decline from the 1975 average of 63.3 but above the 1971 average of 37,400.

But although the bulk of the unemployed are in the more popular provinces of Ontario (228,000), Quebec (236,000) and British Columbia (92,000) proportionately the Atlantic region had the largest percentage of jobless as well as the lowest number of vacant jobs.

Following are the provinces, excluding Newfoundland and Alberta, with their number of unemployed for every vacant job and their unemployment rates in brackets:

Nova Scotia 21 (11 per cent); New Brunswick 17 (11.9 per cent) Prince Edward Island 17 (8.9 per cent) Quebec 18 (9.1 per cent); Ontario 10 (5.8 per cent); Manitoba four (four per cent); Saskatchewan four (4.7 per cent); and B.C. 17 (8.3 per cent).

Saskatchewan, with less than half the population of B.C., had about 4,500 vacant jobs in August, compared with 5,500 in B.C.

The four Atlantic provinces, with a combined population larger than Alberta's, had total vacancies of just over 4,000, compared with about 15,000 for Alberta.

Although the government spent about $13 million in the fiscal year 1975-76 to move workers to where the jobs are, the relocation and other grants covered only a small proportion of the unemployed.

Welfare Paper Tiger

The early assessment of Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm by a political opponent that he was a good politician since he talked a lot about rooting out welfare fraud and cutting off the deadbeats but actually didn't do very much looks to be holding true at this date too.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson made his assessment at the close of the acrimonious spring session of the legislature, after the minister's famous "they better get their shovels" remark and a few other well-chosen remarks that were red meat to the Social Credit party's right-wing supporters who see welfare as a pernicious conspiracy to sap the body politic's precious fluids.

But now Vander Zalm has reversed himself on the only decision of significance (aside from increasing welfare rates in some categories) he's made so far — establishing a flying squad of fraud investigators with police powers — and he's fired the man who was appointed to head this new people's police force.

"I decided he was not the man for the job. We don't want someone to head the program who will go around with a hatchet," the minister was quoted. He also said the man, Gerry Buchanan (who was a special welfare abuse investigator in Surrey when Vander Zalm was mayor) was too "hardline."

That strains our credulity. Too hardline on welfare for Vander Zalm? Wasn't the whole idea to get tough with the frauds who were amassing personal fortunes and driving expensive cars, vacationing in Antigua and buying tailor-made rags on their social assistance allowances? What's to be done about these reprobates now? Who will root them out now that the bleeding hearts have gotten to Vander Zalm?

Clearly, this government was elected on more than one false pretence. Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is a paper tiger. Bring back Phil Gaglardi, and let's have no more such pusillanimous pussy-footing.

Ottawa's Deaf Ear

Trying to understand the logic behind this country's treatment of misdeeds among the citizenry can only result in terrible headaches. Last Sunday night the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation — probably in search of its quota of upbeat stories — detailed how the federal government was establishing a research centre to test hearing aid devices. According to the reporter fully 50 per cent of these bionic marvels are defective and not worth their circuitry.

For at least 10 years there have been complaints from reputable sources, including provincial Tory leader Dr. Scott Wallace, that the hearing aid industry had a lot to explain. Now, 10 years after, Ottawa is finally setting up facilities to test these devices. What could be more cruel than to give a handicapped person false hope, fraudulent hope? In a very real sense selling a defective hearing aid knowingly or selling it to a person who it can't help is one of the most immoral kinds of theft. Yet Ottawa is just now getting around to testing these devices. Meanwhile, the bureaucracy grinds out tougher sentences for various categories of robbery, breaking and entering or other crimes against property.

But so-called "white collar crime" is only now getting any attention. There must be thousands of Canadians out there who have been ripped off, cruelly hoaxed and exploited, while the perpetrators of these crimes are healthy, wealthy and free. No wonder respect for due process is declining when the laws of the land are so weighed to simple crimes against property. Fraud is simply a more subtle form of theft. Its effects can do irreparable damage to human beings, but in most cases a person will receive a harsher sentence for straightforward theft as opposed to fraud. Price fixing convictions bring miniscule fines. Ottawa only now is investigating various brands of hearing aids. It is interesting to note that while the government will carefully examine the machines, the story mentioned nothing about what the law would do the people who manufactured or sold them.

HAROLD GREER

How Many Deaths for Light?

TORONTO — A. R. Burge, the veteran and highly respected public relations officer for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., has asked that I reconsider a recent piece in which I noted that the generation of energy from nuclear fuel inevitably means, according to the latest knowledge, the death of some uranium miners from lung cancer.

Burge's point is that I should have reported this, which he does not dispute, in a relative context — namely, that the use of alternative fuels, principally coal, kills people too and that the human cost of these alternatives is higher than for uranium or thorium. He has submitted a number of learned treatises on the subject which appear to prove his point.

We would thus appear to be left with the depressing conclusion that since the generation of energy involves killing people, we should kill as few as possible by using uranium, rather than coal, to fuel electrical generating stations.

Right Trend

I think not. There can be little doubt that in terms of health hazards and costs from mine accidents, occupational disease, and environmental pollution, it is much more costly to produce electricity from fossil rather than nuclear fuels — subject to the qualification that the problem of long-term storage of nuclear wastes has really not been solved and therefore cannot be included, at this stage, in the cost-benefit equations.

But more costly does not necessarily mean more deadly, and therein lies a great difference. Mining coal does not inevitably mean some miners have to die. Mining uranium does — at least, that is the bottom line of what James Ham, now dean of the school of graduate studies at the University of Toronto, had to say on the subject in his recent report to the Ontario government on the health and safety of workers in Ontario mines.

The issue can be put very simply this way, that if equal numbers of men spend their working lives at mining coal and mining uranium, there will be twice the incidence of lung cancer among the uranium survivors than among the coal survivors at any point in time. There may even be fewer coal mining survivors when the count is taken, because of mine disasters and so forth, but these are accidents and accidents can be prevented. There is nothing inherently deadly about working in a coal mine.

The same thing has been said — is still being said — about a uranium mine, but the Ham report, it seems to me, makes such a view untenable. The whole thrust of making the mining of uranium "safe" has been to improve ventilation and other working conditions, to reduce drastically the radiation levels which are considered acceptable, and to lower the exposure times in any one year and on a career basis for working miners — all on the premises that there is a "threshold" level of exposure below which the incidence of lung cancer amongst uranium miners is the same as that of the male population at large.

But James Ham, who is a scientist and who had the best data in the world available to him, said he could see no evidence of such a threshold (indeed, he showed there wasn't) and concluded that, while everything possible should of course be done to reduce the risk, a higher-than-average incidence of lung cancer amongst uranium miners is inevitable if uranium is to be mined.

The cause is known if the cure is not. Mining uranium ore is a dusty business and the dust is radiated with radon emitters so weak they won't penetrate paper. But the dust is also so fine that, despite protectors, some of it can get into the lungs where radiation can cause cancer.

Coal miners face no such occupational risk. The notorious health risk for coal miners is pneumoconiosis or "black lung." But black lung is not necessarily progressive, certainly not fatal and in some cases not even particularly debilitating. Lung cancer offers no such options.

It seems to me, therefore, that there is a very real difference, a moral difference, between the health hazards of mining coal and mining uranium even though it can be shown that, pound for pound in terms of kilowatts produced, we kill and injure more people, overall, by using coal instead of uranium.

It is the difference between knowing, in the case of coal, that deaths and injuries are statistically inevitable but salving our consciences with the belief and effort that they can be prevented, and knowing, in the case of uranium, that certain deaths are inevitable and cannot be prevented, at least at this stage of industrial and medical knowhow.

Troubled Days?

This surely is a new dimension to industrial safety but I do not pretend to know what can or should be done about it, because in the last analysis, Ray Burge is right.

Society has always been willing to condone the death of a few if it serves the many, the only concession to morality being the fewer the better. If it turns out that because of reactor accidents or waste storage problems, more persons are killed by nuclear energy than by coal-fired energy, then society will quickly insist on coal until all coal is gone, but probably not before.

There is perhaps one escape from the moral dilemma of mining uranium — apart, of course, from a medical cure for cancer. It is conceivable that uranium mines could be so fully automated that only a few machine operators, specially space-suited, need go into them. The cost would be astronomical. Oh well, it's just a thought.

Diagnosis: Bad Fractures

OTTAWA — We do not usually turn to economists for insights into sociological problems but the C. D. Howe Institute of Montreal has one from whom the country's political leaders could take a few lessons from in starting to explain some of our present difficulties.

Judith Maxwell, director of economic policy analysis for the institute, is not of course a run of the mill economist. Her perceptions go well beyond the narrow limits of economics and a speech which she delivered recently Searching for a New Sense of Value, has more wisdom about the consequences of inflation than any I have read by our politicians.

It is unfortunate that not many Canadians will have a chance to read the speech because if they had, it would tell them a great deal about what has happened in the last few years, not just what has happened to them but what has happened inside themselves. We are in the deceleration phase of this acute inflation and, if anyone were sure that psychological attitudes towards it had changed, not much more would be necessary to bring the rate of price increase down to an acceptable level.

Unfortunately, that is not the case. Labor is attempting to get the present anti-inflation program killed completely, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce wants radical changes in it, Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba is threatening to withdraw, presumably to launch some different program of his own. Yet the economic trend, if not the psychological ones, is in the right direction where inflation is concerned.

More Deadly

"Rapid inflation is corrosive and insidious force in any community," Maxwell said in her speech. "It distorts our sense of value, alters our attitudes towards our neighbors and partners in the community and it changes our economic behavior in ways that tend to perpetuate inflation."

She suggests that it produces a tendency to feel cheated by someone else, to fight back by demanding more pay and to become more speculative about purchases.

"Finally, there is a tendency to simply lose one's sense of value so that we don't really know any more what steak should cost or whether a piece of clothing is really worth the $20 price tag.

"In sum, rapid change in prices make people confused and disoriented. Inflation also breeds mistrust in the community."

Maxwell went on to point out that average wage settlements approved by the Anti-Inflation Board this year have been close to 12 per cent while the consumer price index has increased only six per cent.

"Thus wage earners affected by wage controls have made solid gains in real purchasing power — much greater gains than the designers of the anti-inflation program intended," Maxwell pointed out. She did not say, but easily could have, that this fact alone makes some of the attacks on the program astonishing.

"Canadians have been slow to recognize that the situation is improving. The consumer price index increased by 6.2 per cent between August, 1975 and August, 1976 . . . The average household is experiencing far less inflation this year. And the average company is also experiencing a moderation in the rise of costs of some raw materials and in wage costs this year. How does this affect the Canadian public?

"Well, the first point to make is that most of them still feel cheated by inflation. Prices are still high, most are still rising, even if they are rising at slower rates, and it is so long since things have been stable that no one has a clear sense of value."

She then made the interesting point that many people actually lose during the deceleration phase of inflation — those who bought on credit in the expectation of very large income increases and actually receive more modest ones. Rapid inflation creates illusory profits on inventory — but inventory must be replaced at higher prices and taxes must be paid on the inventory prices. So, despite the appearance of prosperity, inventory profits may be followed by a cash bind.

"The inflation illusion has declined sharply. Business is complaining bitterly about the slow recovery in profits this year but when you strip away the inventory effects, they are doing much better than they think. In general, they had a false sense of prosperity during the upswing of inflation and now they have a quite unnecessary sense of insecurity during the deceleration phase."

Many people have tried to drive home the fact that the search for scapegoats during a severe inflation is meaningless but Maxwell puts it well and, since she is not grinding any political axes, may have a better chance of being believed. In her words "the origins of the current inflation lie in complex factors that are outside the influence of any individual or group in Canada — factors such as crop failures, excessive international liquidity, the OPEC cartel, and some ill-chosen fiscal and monetary policies in a number of countries, including Canada."

It seems to me that refusal to admit the truth of this description, whether by opposition politicians, labor leaders or ordinary citizens simply compounds the difficulty of making our way back to stability.

There is another aspect of inflation which is well and simply put in this speech although again others have tried to drive the lesson home — that there has been a lasting change in the relative cost of such things as home heating and industrial use of energy. In future, these will take a larger part of our budgets, whether personal or corporate because basic elements of the value system have changed. At the same time, growth has slowed.

"The longer we try to resist the changes that have occurred in the past few years, the longer the inflation will continue. In other words, we need to learn and accept a new standard of values."

Moral Dilemma

Maxwell went on to draw attention to the disturbing rise in class consciousness, in hostility between groups, that has developed with the inflation.

"For many, pay now determines status. And a worker who earns less than someone he or she feels equivalent to seems to have a deep sense of grievance against society. This is true of firemen, policemen, even the professionals like nurses, teachers, and airline pilots, all of whom have real status in the community in the old-fashioned sense of 'respect.' All of them are prepared to hit the bricks for more pay. This may mean that they are groping for new standards to measure their own self-esteem, but the result is disruptive for the whole community. . . .

"The Canadian community has fractured badly in the past few years. There have been bitter confrontations between federal and provincial governments, between regions, between government and business between government and labor. There have also been political strikes against basic policies like bilingualism and the anti-inflation program. Is all of this anger and frustration the result of double-digit inflation? If so, then we can expect that once inflation subsides the bitterness will diminish and some of the fractures will begin to heal.

"Alternatively, does the anger and frustration reflect an impasse in a more fundamental power struggle among key groups in our society? If the second alternative is correct then the country is in for some very troubled days ahead.

Buck Privates

On Tuesday Sept. 21, I attended a union meeting for local 1201 of the British Columbia Government Employee's Union for the specific reason to have the right to vote and to have the freedom of right to work on Oct. 14, the day of protest.

My main reason being that I am a public servant and feel deeply that I am there to serve the public at their convenience and not them to serve at my convenience. But on reading Sunday Sept. 26 Colonist and having read an article which is a quote from John Fryer that we public servants are "buck privates, who have to be told what to do," I plan on working on Oct. 14 in protest of John Fryer's statement on the grounds that this is a personal insult to me. If for no other reason that I do not have to be told what to do, as, along with the word freedom comes a word responsibility and that responsibility is to serve the public in the best way I know and not be dictated to from John Fryer. — L. M. Hemmelgarn, Victoria.

Hostage-taking

The blame for the latest hostage-taking at the B.C. Penitentiary and the outbreak by another 200 prisoners on September 27th, 1976, (the eighth in 19 months), will have to be attributed to Prime Minister Trudeau, Conservative Leader Joe Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent and all of the members of the House of Commons and Senate who voted to abolish "capital punishment".

What have the inmates got to lose? Kill a guard or two and nothing more will happen to them. They are in prison now and that's where they will remain, for a while at least.

To politicians it matters little that peaceful citizens can no longer walk through the streets safely at night.

I wonder if anyone of them is a fit person to govern this country when they put the lives of the prisoners above the lives of the police enforcement officers, prison guards, prison employees, and last, but by no means least, the law-abiding citizens.

If any of the hostages are killed in this latest outbreak (or any others that may occur) their blood will be on their hands.— Mrs. Elsie E. Power, 707 Esquimalt Road.

Garth Homer

The people of Victoria have lost a rare friend. Garth Homer meant something unique and something memorable to anyone lucky enough to know him. To this day, he means something special to a group of young people who remember what he did for them seven years ago.

In the spring of 1969, Victoria Cool-Aid was a widely hated and misunderstood organization. It was less than a year old, and had few friends among the older and the established of Victoria.

We made an application for financial support to the greater Victoria intermunicipal committee, and they asked Garth Homer's community welfare council to study the matter.

Mr. Homer established an investigation committee, wrote its terms of reference, and did what we at ~~Cool~~Aid least expected. He conducted a bitingly thorough, critical, tough and even-handed examination of our entire operation.

He looked at facts only, drew conclusions, and recommended the support we had requested. His recommendation was accepted, and everything began to change for the better from then on.

In those days, it took real integrity to be objective about a group as controversial as Cool-Aid. In those days, it took real courage to stand as judge and advocate, and to offer unflinching support.

In the days before popularity struck, before recognition and British Commonwealth Youth Awards came along, Garth Homer had the sense of need and of fair play to stand up for a thoroughly disliked little group, and to work for the positive social change in which he believed.

In days to come, I hope we can remember Garth Homer by naming the new recreation centre for the handicapped after him.

In years to come, we'll remember him best as a man of spirit and generosity and truth.—Charles Barber, MLA, Victoria.

Enlightened Play

In answer to the protest letters by John Craggs and E. A. Follows, regarding the play Equus, I saw the play, and the picture I got was the severe suffering of the youth brought on by his so-called "correct" upbringing. His mother was extremely religious, and his father was extremely authoritarian. The boy loved horses, but had a bad experience as a child of six when he was savagely pulled off a horse's back by his father, when an experienced horseman offered the boy a ride. This and other negative attitudes toward him resulted in his God-horse fantasies.

This was the first play in which I saw complete nudity, but there was nothing pornographic about it. It was entirely natural and it was heartbreaking to see the boy unable to accept his masculinity, because of his unhappy past.

This type of play should lead to a more enlightened and less demoralizing social life.

I speak as an ex-public health nurse, who has seen the seamy side of life in its many aspects. — Berta Schmidt, Victoria.

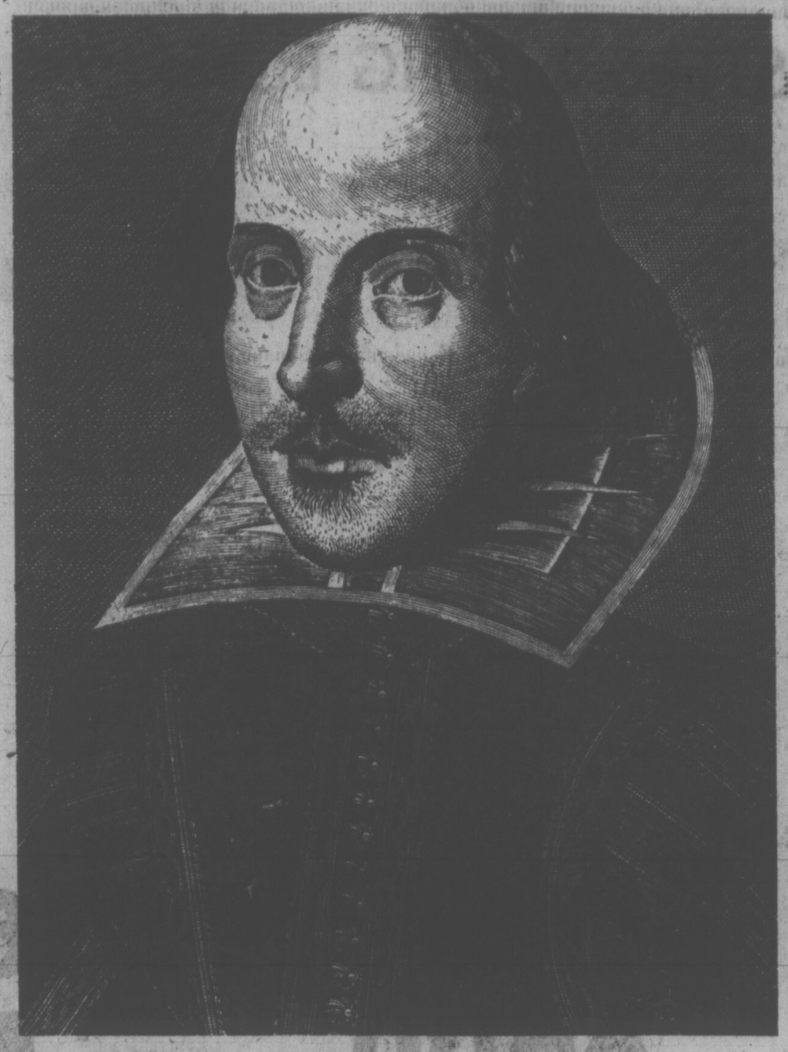
Shakespeare: Why Do We Honor Him So?



By WALTER KERR
New York Times

Guess which playwright grossed more than three million, fifty thousand dollars this year in a single Canadian theatre (and didn't get a nickel in royalties out of it, just to give you too strong a hint)? Guess which playwright, not content with draining the economy dry in that single situation, was also responsible during the same period for maintaining — exclusively or nearly exclusively — at least 13 other playhouses devoted to festivals of his work across North America.

Guessing-game is over because you've got it. Shakespeare. So long as summer is with us, and sometimes deep into the fall, Shakespeare is performed out-of-doors in parks, indoors in amphitheatres especially built to accommodate his plays, in school auditoriums, in public libraries, in any adequate space that can be usurped for the duplicating and reduplicating of one 400-year-old strand of what may safely be called culture.

But summer's not the whole of it, and neither, of course, is this continent. Shakespeare's popularity here is not simply a matter of box-lunches on the lawn and agreeable two-day motor trips to some of our quainter towns; neither is it an attempt to appropriate for ourselves, by sheer volume of production, a playwright who belongs first to Great Britain and then to the world. The moment the leaves have fallen and the festival coffee-stands shut up, the very same Shakespearean plays that have bayed at a summer moon will be slipping onto the schedule of every repertory company across the land.

New Theatre

Abroad, the Stratford company in England will be keeping its own Festival running until late January, when it will send at least two productions down to the Royal Shakespeare Company's London base at the Aldwych. If the Aldwych no longer borrows as much from Stratford as it once did, it's no doubt because the RSC's former director, Peter Hall, is now busily in charge of the brand new British National Theatre, whose original repertory included a four-hour Albert Finney Hamlet. When the National Theatre's remaining two stages are completed — one promises to be a radical variant on the open platform stage. Shakespeare inspired — there'll unquestionably be more Shakespeare nestled alonside John Osborne and Noel Coward.

As if that weren't enough, and in spite of the financial and construction delays that have bedevilled the two remaining theatres, there's a serious move afoot in London to raise one and one-half million pounds to build, independently, a full-scale reconstruction of Shakespeare's Globe near the site on which Shakespeare himself once performed and on which the cannon used in "Henry VIII" managed to set fire to the thatched roof, burning the whole octagon down. No end in sight here.

Further abroad, you can pick up Shakespeare in almost any country you care to reach by plane, train, or ship, problems of translation notwithstanding. Two Gentlemen of Verona is just now being given its first production in Paris, most successfully. The most affecting, perhaps the only truly affecting, handling of Ophelia's mad scenes I ever saw appeared in a French production staged — if I remember correctly — by Jean-Louis Barrault. The most maddening experience I've ever loyally endured to the bitter end was a Russian film version of Othello with the Original English dubbed onto the sound-track (lip-sync forsooth, no dubber ever came near matching up Russian histrionics with that rippling iambic line). And no one was the least bit surprised to find Shakespearian directorial style heavily influenced for a five-to-ten year period by a critic who was neither British nor American but Polish (Jan Kott, who turned the whole canon into a replay of Samuel Beckett's Endgame). If England finally saw the day when the sun set on its empire, it has yet to see the day when the sun sets on Shakespeare.

Now to an obvious question that is almost never asked: why? You can say, right off, that Shakespeare's dominance of not only the English-speaking scene but of the world-scene as well is due, plainly and simply, to the fact that he is the world's greatest playwright. You can say it and get an argument. What of Sophocles, Euripides, Moliere? Pretty good men, all — and there are others. Surely Odeipus can be put up against Hamlet with a good chance of winning, or at least earning a draw. Is Lear absolutely a better play than The Bacchae? Which comedy of Shakespeare's can be most confidently pitted against, say, The School for Wives? Yet there are no Euripidean festivals in the Great Lakes region, no full seasons of Moliere in Manchester.

Volume Too

Simplify the claim a bit and say that Shakespeare is the greatest dramatist ever to have written in English, a safe-enough proposition. Then what's he doing using up so much stage time, and so much critical energy, in Germany, Poland, France, Russia, where have you? Translation is a sticky business and those who must come to him through it certainly aren't hearing the English that presumably makes him great.

Compound the claim somewhat to see if we can arrive at a formula that will explain away everything and say that he is not only the greatest playwright in English but also the man who produced the greatest number of playable plays. Volume does count. It's one reason we are able to maintain so many festivals over so many years: there are enough texts to allow for rotation. As You Like It can be skipped for four or five years at a time, there's always Much Ado to take up the slack, and, weather permitting, even Cymbeline and Titus Andronicus can be wedged in at intervals. The only other playwright who's had a continuing festival named after him on this continent is Bernard Shaw, and volume has something to do with that, too. Sheridan and Wilde, for instance, simply didn't produce enough material to keep seasonal wheels spinning.

Even so, the compounded answer doesn't quite do the trick, at least 18 of Euripides' plays survive; and close to 20 of Moliere's belong to the years of his maturity. Acknowledge these men as great, and count the number of their plays available, and they should, it would seem, be in business alongside Shakespeare. They're not. Neither does anyone think of doing an Elizabethan (or Jacobean) Festival, in order to pick up the accumulated work of Shakespeare's contemporaries, some of it marked by genius: Marlowe, Massinger, Jonson, Ford, Webster, and Beaumont and Fletcher could be packaged. We remain interested in one man, one man's work.

So interested that we are willing to sit through the same plays year after year (or so), suffering the boredom that is inevitable whenever one or another (or a dozen) productions are done badly, dedicated, chance-taking, looking, looking, looking. Of course some of this is lip-service, culture-nibbling, doing what we were told was good for us when we were in high school (though I never knew anyone to read Silas Marner year after year just because they ;were told it was good for them in high school). Some of it is stargazing, sitting at adoring attention because Katharine Hepburn or Richard Burton or Albert Finney or Maggie Smith has chosen to drop by this year.

But when all allowances are made, there is still an ocean of interest — genuine interest, passionate interest, don't-bother-me interest — left over. No amount of false piety will explain away a single theatre's grossing more than three million after 20 years of operation (Stratford, Ontario), let alone the mushrooming festivals and hundreds of independently staged productions that crop up year after year in country after country. The massive, resolute, indefectible audience that pursues Shakespeare through thick and thin is, I suggest, looking for something in particular, something that so excites them when they find it that they are prepared to survive incompetence, unintelligibility, bad roads, and The Taming of the Shrew along the way.

Looking for what? I know what I'm looking for, though, being a reviewer, I may be atypical; but I think not altogether. Let's see if we can get at it through one more process of elimination. Shall we agree that audiences don't go to Shakespeare for the plots? In the first place, they know the plots, most of them all too well. It can be quite a chore sitting through a mediocre playing of the "potion" scene from Romeo and Juliet when you know absolutely everything that's going to happen after it — provided that damned girl ever does get through with the thing.

In addition, there isn't a plot that's not structurally troubled — why does Iago hate Othello so, is it Lear's fault or his daughters', is Macbeth really ambitious or merely his lady's pawn, what on earth gets into Leontes to make him a jealous madman on the instant? — or that could stand up, architecturally, to the Oedipus. And those that aren't troubled are either casual or downright cavalier, as Shakespeare himself genially indicated when he subtitled one of his comedies What You Will. A snap of the finger for the plots. Shakespeare borrowed his plots, mixed up his plots, dismissed his plots — though he was a master, of course, of making them lead to stageworthy scenes. But that's what they were to him: handy crowbars, chisels, wedges for prying the world open so that he could get inside it.

Human Secrets

Neither do audiences really go for the language, though it be heresy to say so. Reams and reams of the language are lost at every performance, some because relatively few actors are up to reading it rapidly, clearly, and beautifully all at once, some because our attention isn't and shouldn't be on the words as words but on the suspenseful human secrets they're disclosing. If you want to know how truly beautiful Othello is as language, you'll do better sitting at home and reading it, reveling in it line by line. Again, the language as such, stunning as it is, can't be the sine qua non or the French, Germans, and Poles would be put off by their inability to hear it as we do and wouldn't be spending so much valuable theatre-time trying to catch, and very often succeeding in catching, the same elusive quarry we're after. The words, like the plots, are means of getting at something else.

What else? We're left with the interior lives of the characters. And I'm not going to propose that Shakespeare is great primarily because of his people, or that his knack for characterization is the one thing that triumphantly holds all else together. It's silly to isolate one facet of a man's talent and make it the sole, or the principal, badge of his genius. Greatness really comes all of a piece, stands indivisible, resides in the words that penetrate souls as much as in the souls that are penetrated, resides even in the instinct for choosing a plot that will set the subsequent processes into quick motion. (Shakespeare's greatness further includes an uncanny facility for making his materials visible, readily adapted to the physical stage; most good directors will tell you that the staging-cues are all there, imbedded in the movement of the text.)

I shall suggest, however, that there is something most peculiar about Shakespeare's methods of characterization, something unique about the manner in which his fretting shadows acquire life. His characters aren't stylized, as Moliere's are. His characters aren't archetypal, as Sophocles' are. Neither are they psychological in the Euripidean sense, with rather schematized idiosyncrasies still not entirely free of the guiding hands of the gods. Shakespeare's men and women are free. They are almost free of him.

More than any playwright who ever lived, I think Shakespeare gave his imagined figures his blessing and their liberty, allowing them an individuality that need not be categorized and could not be explained because it was theirs: willful, perverse, self-contradictory, electric, mercurial, evanescent, ineffable, inevitable, there. Could you prick them, they would bleed. But you cannot prick them any more than you can seize lightning-bolts; once you've seen the flash, it's too late. They're alive not as analyzable ideas but as fleeting, crackling, ungraspable nerve-ends, brainwaves, emotions erupted from such depths that their sources can never be charted. In the very same moment they are present and have passed. Untrappable, unchallengeable.

To achieve the translucent substantiality that so undeniably exists on stage, Shakespeare, I think, surrendered more of himself, more of his own given life, to the thousand-and-one phantoms he created — handed it over intact, in all its unpredictability — than any other man who spent his years making phantoms exult, cry, breathe, die. That is why we know so little about him. Having unconditionally and irrevocably transferred so much of himself to the creatures literally unleashed by his imagination, there was little left to know. A Greek could always argue with Aeschylus after coming from a performance of The Eumenides; because of the play's personal argument, he'd know he was dealing with a person. Euripides was so much a person in his plays that he could be exiled for what he wrote, as Moliere could be censured. We have no such sense of Shakespeare. It's all dissolved into quicksilver, and the quicksilver is now on the stage.

Given the peculiar nature of what he accomplished, Shakespeare did make things difficult for actors — and for all the rest of us. We, actors and audiences alike, can only catch this world on the wing when we are made sufficiently airborne ourselves, lifted by a spurt of intuition that becomes a breeze and then a gale. The circuit is so live, so restless, so urgently self-charging, that it is hard to hook into, almost too hot to handle. Rarely do we make full contact. The experience of seeing an entire Shakespearean play fully realized in all its parts — and we know from experience that each of the parts is realizable — is so infrequent that we really give up expecting it, let alone demanding it. A few "perfect" productions in each man's lifetime, no more.

What we do expect, and for the most part get, is productions in which one or another passage, or one or another role, is suddenly touched with the life-giving finger that Shakespeare finally bestowed upon Prospero. These lucky strikes, in which an almost invisible small flame grows larger and larger until its ullumination is literally stunning, come to different playgoers at different times.

Which brings me to what I think we're all doing as we go to the same plays again and again. We're trying to complete them, to add up perfect productions, in our heads. I may say to myself, "All right, I know what and who Jaques is now, I have met Sir Andrew Aguecheek live; will someone please do as much for me with Orlando or Malvolio tonight?" I may know that the casket-scene is brimming over with sly humor, even if I don't hear its humor reproduced next time; next time will the trial scene work? I am satisfied that John Gielgud is right in giving Hamlet first-night nerves for the player's speech; what unexpected quality can I be made to hear in Macbeth's "Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow?"

Surprises

We know that the strange rustle of slippered feet, the heartbeat, the swift and untraceable flight of thought that are uniquely Shakespeare's exist, exist everywhere. We know because we've heard these things, parts of them, in the unlikeliest plays: in Cymbeline and Titus Andronicus and The Winter's Tale. Perhaps, if we go again tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow, we'll one day be able to assemble in our memories mosaics of our own, feel that we've successfully scoured all the nooks and crannies and come away with at least some plays whole. No great effort to the continuing search; there are always surprises to keep us contented.

And no great hurry, either. For it is precisely the fluidity, the ambiguity, the contrariety, the unfettered independence and consequent spontaneity Shakespeare has given his people that permits them to pass from year to year, decade to decade, now century to century, without harm. Nothing impedes them; they can walk through ideological walls. Each age, as we know, rediscovers itself in Shakespeare, which means that the freedom the playwright gave to his creatures was authentic, with no fine print holding anything back. For himself, Shakespeare had only one thing to say, and he kept saying it over and over and over again: "What a piece of work is man!"

And so we are still engaged, with him, in the greatest manhunt in history.

Building Mosaics In Our Memories

Up, Up and Away The United Way

By MILTON MAYER
The Progressive

"Nobody Has a Lower Fare To California than United." It's worth a million — or a hundred million — dollars to United to say this in full-page ads across the land.

Nobody Has a Lower Fare than United.

Nobody Has a Higher Fare, Either.

They All Have the Same Fare.

A combination in restraint of trade, solemnly sanctified by the Civil Aeronautics Board, whose business it is to administer the laws (including the Sherman Antitrust Act).

The way to determine that an ostensibly competitive operation, such as air transport or the petroleum industry, is monopoly is to look at the competitors' comparative prices. If the prices move generally up and down together, winding up generally identical, you've got a monopoly. The champagne breakfast, the wider seat, the cleaner teeth on the stewardesses do not go to the essence of competition. Only the price does. Is the price competitive for the same essential service of product? You don't have to have a Clean Rest Room at the gas station; what you have to have is gas.

Nobody Has a Lower Fare than United. Or a Higher.

United thinks we are slobs. It knows we are. It has pretested the advertisement and discovered that it's worth a million dollars or a hundred million.

We are illiterate slobs.

If we were literate we would know that Socrates went to the oracle at Delphi to find out who was the wisest man in Athens, and was told, "No man is wiser than Socrates." Not that Socrates is the wisest, or even wise; only that no man is wiser.

A literate slob, Socrates. He was not misled by the oracle as you and I are by United. He knew he knew nothing, and he soon found out that the statesmen, the poets, and the artisans knew nothing either. (They all thought they knew something, and in that paradoxical sense he was wiser than they.)

You may say that we cannot help being slobs. But you may not say that we cannot help being illiterate. You may not say that we cannot help being conned by United Air Lines, than which Nobody Has a Higher Fare.

LABOR PROTESTERS AIDING ELDERLY

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — They do things differently in British Columbia's Cariboo country and the observance of Labor's day of protest against wage controls Oct. 14 will be no exception.

There'll be a protest march but it'll be brief.

"Probably we'll have one about noon, down by the post office and back," John Lawrence, South Cariboo Labor Council secretary-treasurer, said Tuesday.

Then the workers will get back to taking out senior citizens and handicapped people for a drive "and a cup of tea, or something," and getting needed maintenance work done around the senior citizens' home.

"We just don't know yet how many people we'll have; not everyone has decided whether they'll be working," Lawrence said.

"We want to show that labor isn't all bad, like some people think. And people in the Cariboo are different, you know. We don't treat our labor and politics like they do in, say, the east end of Vancouver.

"Anyway, we figure that getting something done for these people who need it is better than standing around picking your nose."

Three Guns to Kill Pair—Crown

NANAIMO (CP) — The Crown said Tuesday three weapons probably were used in the double murder of two Duncan residents in 1975.

James Rodriguez, 32, of Duncan faces the two murder charges. The trial, which the Crown said might last two weeks or more, opened Tuesday before Mr. Justice John Aiken of British Columbia Supreme Court and a jury of eight men and four women.

Rodriguez is charged with the deaths of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones on Oct. 24, 1975. He was deported from the United States to face the charges.

David Williams of Duncan, Crown counsel, said several .22-calibre slugs had been found in the house in which Oldfield and Jones had lived.

One slug matched a .22 Rodriguez bought in Victoria, Williams said. One matched a weapon Rodriguez is said to have dismantled and tried to destroy and a third matched a weapon owned by a man called Frank.

The latter weapon had been kept in Frank's car but Rodriguez had use of the car and keys to it, Williams said. He said there were several firearms which Rodriguez attempted to destroy by cutting the barrels into bits, by burning the stocks and by hiding them. A .22-calibre rifle was found in the basement of a Victoria house which Rodriguez had visited, said Williams.

Williams said Rodriguez had lived with Oldfield for some time before the Jones woman came to live with Oldfield. Bad feelings developed between the woman and Rodriguez, he said. It was alleged that Rodriguez talked about "vengeance on Oldfield ... possibly of shooting and killing because of being evicted (from the house) while he (Rodriguez) was on holiday in Spain.

Williams said about Oct. 24, 1975, Rodriguez had use of a rented car during which time he went to Victoria where he bought an Argentine-made .22-calibre semi-automatic rifle from a department store. Oldfield and Jones were last seen alive Oct. 24 in the Maple Bay beer parlor. Their bodies were discovered in a dump near Duncan on Nov. 18.

Williams said the Crown alleges Rodriguez forged and cashed two cheques of the victims, one "apparently signed by Oldfield" was for $1,000 and the other, for $1,500, "was apparently signed by Pamela Jones."

It was also alleged that Rodriguez also had numerous pieces of identification (credit cards) belonging to the two people.

Williams told the jury that Rodriguez left Canada for Barbados, later coming back to North America, but staying in the United States.

Rodriguez called two friends, referred to by Williams as Frank and Brust, to meet him in Seattle. The two met him and were told in detail how Rodriguez killed Oldfield and Jones, said Williams.

Frank and Brust came back to Duncan and told the police, whereupon two decomposed bodies were found in the dump covered in twigs, leaves and carpeting and wrapped in blankets and sleeping bags.

A search of the house in which Oldfield and Jones had lived disclosed blood on the floor and bedding, several .22-calibre slugs and shells as well as bullet damage to the house, the Crown counsel said.

Williams said it was apparent that Oldfield came home and was confronted by Rodriguez who was waiting with a weapon. Oldfield ran to the bedroom where "Rodriguez shot him in the bedroom."

"He came in and he shot her as well."

Plane Search Is Stepped Up

Times News Services

In anticipation of poor weather, the searchmaster in charge of a search for a Cessna 120 aircraft missing since Sept. 23 has ordered intensification of the hunt, a Canadian Forces spokesman said Tuesday in Kamloops.

The spokesman, Capt. Craig Mills of Edmonton, said the searchmaster, Captain Cecil Lowness, based his action on the fact that snow fell Monday night on lower slopes of mountains separating British Columbia from Alberta.

The plane, at least 25 years old, was piloted by Evan Wall, 22, of Calgary, and carried Ed York, 32. They were heading from Airdrie, Alta., to Kelowna by way of Revelstoke, but were last heard in the Banff area.

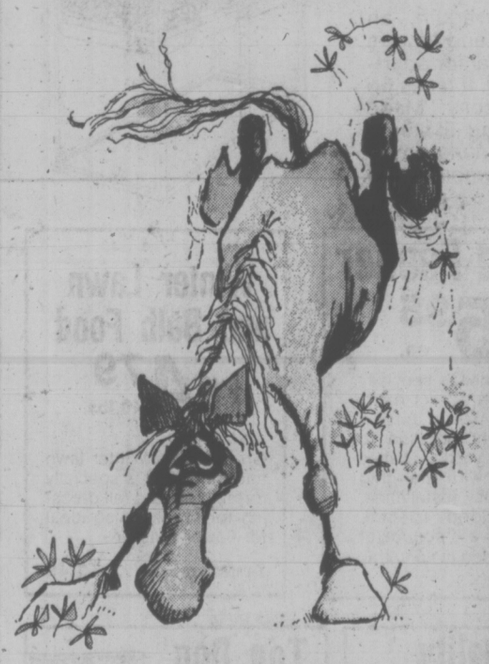
Four more helicopters joined the search Tuesday, bringing the total to seven, but no trace of the missing plane was found. Four fixed-wing civilian aircraft were searching between Fernie and Invermere, B.C. in case the plane drifted southward.

The wreckage of a Piper Comanche aircraft containing the bodies of four Americans was found Tuesday in mountainous terrain, 80 miles northwest of Prince George. Pilot of the aircraft was Richard Treinen and his passengers were Robert Dimette, Art O'Brien and Bill Hook, all of San Diego.

The plane was reported missing on a flight from Prince George to Prince Rupert, a distance of about 350 miles.

The rescue spokesman said the piece of wing found by the hunter about 80 miles northwest of Prince George has been identified as from a Piper Comanche. He said it was found in mountainous terrain.

HOW TO MIX A HORSESHOT



Its name not withstanding, the Horseshot is not a case for the veterinarian, but rather a mixed drink of the Smirnoff school, a sort of Bloody Mary with the extra flavour kick of horse radish.

But the Horseshot is no second runner. With a charm and nip all its own, this great red beauty can keep up with the best of them.

To make a Horseshot, pour 1½ oz. Smirnoff into a tall glass with ice, fill with tomato juice, add horse radish to taste and stir. Sip slowly.

It's Justice? Victim Asks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marshall Green, 43, of Surrey, says a man who shot him, causing him to lose his job and possibly his leg, has scarcely lost any time away from his job "after admitting that he tried to kill me."

Green writes in a letter to the editor in today's Sun that at a party June 24 at Nakusp, at which he said he remained a sober bystander, he agreed to take home two inebriated women.

"While doing so a man, whom I later learned was the separated husband of one of the woman, accosted his estranged wife with a shotgun.

"I shouted to the man not to shoot and he turned to me, thrust the muzzle of his shotgun against my chest and stated that he would kill me, too. I managed to push the muzzle of the gun downwards before it went off, shattering my left leg at the groin."

Green, married and with two children, said his assailant was charged with attempted murder and remanded for psychiatric assessment. He said he learned some months later from a newspaper clipping that the man had been sentenced to five weeks in jail to be served on weekends and probation for six months on a charge of wounding with intent . . .

"My concern is that I have lost my livelihood, have and will suffer terrible pain, will have to undergo extensive surgery at least twice, may lose the use of my leg forever; and my assailant has scarcely lost any time away from his job after admitting that he tried to kill me."

Green said he must spend years in civil litigation against his attacker or settle for an award from the provincial criminal injuries compensation board whose maximum award is $15,000.

"Is that justice?" he asks in his letter.

Emcee Denies Proposition For Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former master of ceremonies at the Penthouse Cabaret denied Tuesday he tried to proposition undercover police officer Leslie Schulze at the club last year.

Tony Pisani was testifying during the trial of Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., Joseph Philliponi, Rose Filippone, Domenick Filippone, Ross Filippone, Jan Seditk and Minerva Kelly, all charged with conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution, and of conspiring to corrupt public morals.

He also denied the constable's previous testimony that on one occasion when she was posing as a prostitute, he introduced her to a man he identified as a pimp.

Teachers Reject New Pact, Urge Rollback Proposal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The executive of the Vancouver Teachers Organization has rejected a two-year contract offered by the school board following a federal Anti-Inflation Board wage rollback but recommends a school board proposal to pay back the overage over nine months.

Last week, the federal board ruled that 1976 wage increases for 7,100 teachers in Vancouver, Surrey, Coquitlam and Burnaby had to be rolled back to an average raise of 9.6 per cent.

The 3,200 elementary and secondary school teachers in Vancouver had received 12.2-per-cent increase in January following arbitration.

After the federal order, the school board gave the teachers a choice—refund the estimated overpayment of $300 or re-open the contract to negotiate a two-year agreement within federal guidelines for 1976 and 1977.

Gordon Wilson, labor relations officer for the board, said that Vancouver teachers would be eligible for an 18.37 per-cent increase over the two-year period.

A spokesman for the teachers' executive said Tuesday that in addition to rejection of the two-year proposal, the executive also is recommending that the teachers continue contract negotiations for 1977 under normal precedures.

Two Safes Cracked

Safecrackings at two businesses are being investigated by Victoria police.

U.S. Government Unions Studying Strike Action

WASHINGTON (WP) — Leaders from unions representing more than a million U.S. government workers held a secret meeting in Washington Tuesday to talk about the possibility of work slowdowns or a strike against the government.

Nearly a dozen federal union representatives, including observers from postal employee organizations, attended the session, which was called by the American Federation of Government Employees, a 265-000-member AFL-CIO union with workers in both the white collar civil service, and in blue collar defence department jobs.

The union has taken the lead in mounting a political campaign against the Administrration to protest the "inadequate" 4.83 per cent federal-military pay raise the President put into effect Oct. 1. Unions had demanded an across-the-board 8.2 per cent hike instead of the sliding scale raises the President ordered, with upper grade employees getting more than cerical aides.

Pay raise protests have been scheduled in several cities by AFGE locals, and some units including the big Social Security Administration headquarters local in Baltimore have taken votes which show "overhelming" support for a strike according to union officials.

In additon to several AFGE officials, union leaders at the session Tuesday included those from the independent National Federation of Federal Employees; the National Association of Government Employees-International Brotherhood of Police Officers; National Treasury Employees Union; and the Association of Civilian Technicians, whose membership is made up of Army and Air National Guard workers.

FORD ADVISER ASKED FAVOR?

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. Senate interior subcommittee charged Tuesday that Howard Callaway, President Gerald Ford's former campaign manager, sought to pressure federal agencies into giving favorable treatment to his ski resort in Colorado.

By a 5-to-4 party-line vote, the enviornment and land resources subcommttee concluded that Callaway, while secretary of the army, used friendly contacts in the agriculture department in an attempt to win approval for an expansion of his resort at Crested Butte, Colo. The contacts were made in July, 1975.

The Democratic majority asserted that Callaway's actions "can only serve to undermine public confidence in the conduct of the government."

SEX BIAS DRINKING ARGUED

WASHINGTON — The justices of the U.S. Supreme Court were notified Tuesday that it's very hard to get drunk on beer with only 3.2 per cent alcohol.

"It's so diluted that you get bloated before you get drunk," attorney Frederick Gilbert of Tulsa, Okla., told the court. "You have to force it down."

Gilbert, admittedly testifying from his own experience and going beyond the evidence in the case being heard, made the observation in arguing that Oklahoma has no basis—other than sex discrimination—for keeping men from buying "3.2" beer until they are 21 while letting women buy it at age 18. Members of neither sex can buy beer with a higher alcoholic content until they are 21.

An Oklahoma assistant attorney general, James Gray, denied the sex bias charge, citing traffic figures as showing that young beer-drinking males who drive are greater highway hazards than women are.

If the court accepts Oklahoma's traffic rationale, Gilbert argued, "I think it will be the end of equal protection. If that's all it takes to get around the equal protection cláuse (of the Constitution), let's forget equal protection."

Ford, Carter TV Tonight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter says he's ready to slug it out with President Ford in tonight's defence policies. But White House aides say Ford isn't preparing for what may be the toughest questions he'll face.

The second of the three debates between the two candidates in the Nov. 2 U.S. presidential election is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. PDT, at the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco. The three major U.S. commercial television networks and the Public Broadcasting Service will carry the encounter.

There have been suggestions that Ford may be asked about the effect on African countries of the racial slur that led to Monday's resignation of his agriculture secretary, Earl Butz.

And Ford may be asked about a report by the General Accounting Office which says 41 U.S. lives were lost in the Mayaguez incident last year because of hasty action and poor intelligence.

Ford advisers brushed aside suggestions that the Butz affair might come up in tonight's debate. But U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations William Scranton, asked in a television interview on Sunday about Butz' comments, said he fears the incident may drive "a wedge in relationships between the West and the Africans."

Since it became public knowledge last Friday that Butz had made an obscene racial remark about blacks, Ford has been unavailable for questions on the matter. Ford's only comments came Monday when he read a prepared statement in which he regretfully accepted Butz' resignation.

Mike Duval, a White House special counsel, said Ford has been given no special briefing material on responses he could make either to questions about the Butz affair or the Mayaguez incident.

Canada, U.S. Talk TV Today

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials hope to "explore new ground" for a solution of the border televison dispute at a meeting with Canadian government representatives here today.

However, before the meeting began, the U.S. team was somewhat miffed to learn that Harry Boyle, head of the Canadian Radio-Televison Commission and a key figure in broadcast policy, would not attend. Earlier they had been led to believe that Boyle would be here.

While U.S. officials would not say in advance what they have in mind, one suggested that there would be discussion of "more specific possibilities" of settling what has become an abrasive and emotional issue between the two countries.

At an earlier meeting in Ottawa, the U.S. was annoyed that Canada was represented by low-level officials without authority to negotiate. There are some fears that Boyle's absence might undermine today's talks, at which one of the U.S. representatives will be Richard Wiley, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

The U.S. still refuses to accept Canada's contention that the question of tax concessions to Canadian advertisers on American TV stations is not negotiable.

U.S. broadcasters say they stand to lose $20 milion a year in revenue because Canadians will no longer want to advertise on their statins.

FLU SHOTS URGED FOR U.S. CHILDREN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — U.S. federal health officials have reversed their earlier stand and now recommend swine flu shots for children, especially those who suffer from asthma or heart defects.

Deland Meriweather, director of the national influenza immunization program, said Tuesday that high-risk children were receiving the vaccine at 16 test centres throughout the U.S. He said he expects vaccination of normal children will begin on a national basis after a hearing at the National Institute of Health conference in Bethesda, Md., Oct. 22.

When the immunization program began in the U.S. last Friday, only those over age 18 were eligible for the free inoculations.

Meriweather said children were excluded from the program not because they are safe from the disease but because tests showed "an unacceptable incidence of side effects in youngsters."

Red Guns Beat Butter: Report

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is spending much more on defence and armaments than previously realized, but lags far behind the United States in military technology, and industrial and agricultural capacity, according to new U.S. intelligence estimates released Tuesday.

In congressional testimony, the directors of the Central and Defence Intelligence Agencies described a Soviet Union which cannot feed itself, which is technologically backward, which is suffering through a sort of Soviet-style recession, but which nevertheless is outspending the United States on defence by a large margin.

Neither intelligence agency claimed that Soviet spending has actually endangered the security of the United States, and George Bush, director of the CIA, emphasized that the upward revision of CIA estimates of the Russians' defence spending did not mean their defence programs were bigger than previously realized.

An important explanation for the upward revisions, the CIA said, is the apparent fact that "Soviet defence industries are far less effcient than we formerly believed . . . about half as efficient as we thought."

The CIA used to estimate that the Soviets spent 6 to 8 per cent of GNP on defence, and now calculate that the true figure is 11 to 13 per cent. (The U.S. spends about 6 per cent of its much larger GNP on defence.)

Unspecified news sources of information on the Soviet defence economy led the CIA to adjust its estimates upward.

Some of the information, presumably, has come from recent emigres from the U.S.S.R., some of whom have worked in Soviet military industry.

Bush told Sen. William Proxmire's sub-committee on priorities and economy in government of the joint economic committee that the Soviet Union does not have a single weapons system which demonstrates technological superiority to the U.S.

On th other hand, Bush said, the U.S. has many weapons systems that the Russians cannot duplicate.

Vancouver Protester In U.S. Jail

WASHINGTON (CP) — A 39-year-old Canadian and a 64-year-old U.S. war veteran were arrested Tuesday in front of the White House as they sought to protest U.S. nuclear weapons strategy.

James Douglass of Vancouver and Robert Schneider of San Francisco were taken into custody for demonstrating without a permit.

Sister Mary Alban of Toronto, a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph, also took part in the demonstration but was not arrested. She moved away after police warnings as the demonstrators decided she should avoid arrest so she could keep an appointment with Democratic officials.

The trio was on the third day of what is intended to be a 30-day fast to protest U.S. nuclear policy and specifically use of the Trident submarine.

One police officer said Douglass and Schneider face maximum penalties of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine, but another added that sentences for such offences rarely amount to as many as 30 days.

The three demonstrators said they first appeared in front of the White House Monday and were questioned by police but were not told they needed a permit.

Douglass said it would take 14 days to get a permit and the trio would not be allowed to carry their placards near the White House.

Before the arrests were made, a dozen policemen, five police cars, a police van and two police motorcycles were lined up in front of the group of six.

LITTLE LEAKAGE

ANCHORAGE (AP — Leakage appears minimal from damaged cargo tanks after a vessel carrying 175,000 barrels of jet fuel ran aground in Cook Inlet 70 miles southwest of here, U.S. Coast Guard officials said Tuesday.

Petty Officer Stuart Lane said the 30,000-ton U.S. Navy vessel Sealift Pacific floated free after the accident early Tuesday and was anchored near the scene. Fuel seeping from nine of the ship's 25 tanks was "undetectable so far. We've been unable to see any of it. It's such a light product it probably evaporates or dissipates with the current," he said.

Cmdr. R. C. Nichols, federal on-site co-ordinator and director of the Anchorage marine safety office, said he was unable to detect signs of a spill near the vessel or on surrounding beaches.

Nichols said although crude oil products are difficult to clean up, it is relatively easy to determine what damage has been done after a spill. With refined products such as jet fuel, he said, environmental damage is more difficult to detect and often is not immediately apparent.

Saanich Police Say No

Saanich policemen voted unanimously Tuesday night to reject the municipal police board's offer of a 7.91 per cent increase and to take their 1976 contract to binding arbitration, a spokesman said today.

Saanich police association president Corporal Phil Jamieson said the offer would leave the Saanich force one of the five lowest paid west of Ontario.

Within hours of its submission, the 101-member association rejected it by a unanimous vote.

Although members were "absolutely disgusted" and disappointed, he said, they also rejected strike action and decided to seek arbitration.

The association has been without a contract since its last one, making Saanich one of the highest-paid police forces in the country, expired Dec. 31, 1975.

Jamieson said the association, which requested a 12 per cent increase last January, feels Saanich policemen must maintain their "historical relationship" with other forces.

There has been only one negotiating meeting with the municipality's represenatives in the past 10 months, he added.

Meanwhile, negotiations between the Victoria police board and the city's policemen's union — which appeared to be breaking down in recent weeks — have apparently taken a turn for the better.

Union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said today "heartening" progress has been made in the past week in talks with Mayor Mike Young, the chairman of the police board.

"We are still talking back and forth but I hope that in the next week or so we might have something to put to the men," he said.

Taxi Taken Over

An 18-year-old youth was to appear in provincial court today charged with theft of a cab in downtown Victoria.

Police said the Victoria Taxi cab was "forcibly taken" in the 600-block Yates at about 12:20 a.m. and was spotted by police at Douglas and Burnside.

An arrest was made after a 3½-mile chase.

Police said the taxi driver, Lee Wells, 30, of 1418 Harrison, had picked up a man at Cook and Pandora and was driving him downtown when the man, saying he had a knife in his boot, ordered Wells out of the cab.

Aldermen Adamant On Park

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Residents fighting the expansion of the Royal Oak industrial park were told Tuesday night Saanich council won't back down on the controversial issue.

But they were assured careful planning will be done to make the pill they must swallow more palatable.

About 100 of them were at Glanford elementary school to tackle Saanich council members and Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board.

Saanich's request to have 79 acres lifted out of the Agricultural Land Reserve and used for industrial purposes, swelling the industrial complex to about 120 acres, has received approval in principle from the regional district.

Campbell told the residents the board is awaiting input from the other municipalities before changing the official regional plan to allow the 79 acres to be used for industrial purposes.

Campbell said it would be an "economic use of land", adding the acreage is "too expensive for agricultural purposes".

Dick Gauthier of the Royal Oak Concerned Citizens replied: "Developers and speculators have been purchasing this land for years. Speculators have bought and held off. These are the people who have put the price up."

But Ald Roy Wootten and Ald. John McDonald insisted the industrial park is needed to increase the tax base in Saanich.

"I am in favor of an industrial park. It should be properly planned and developed so it is not an eyesore," Wootten said.

Even back in the time of former mayor Hugh Curtis, now municipal affairs minister, Saanich was planning an industrial park in Royal Oak, McDonald said. (Curtis was invited to the meeting but didn't attend.)

"We're going to do the best we can for the people in this area, still recognizing the needs of the municipality as a whole," McDonald promised. "If you have no confidence in council then change council. That's your prerogative."

Mayor Ed Lum said: "The need for servicing in the Greater Victoria area demanded we should have something of this size. Council will have full control of anything that goes in."

Gauthier asked if council will ignore the wishes of 503 taxpayers who had signed questionnaires opposing the industrial park.

One woman reminded aldermen that Royal Oak was promised a recreation facility in election campaigning two years ago.

"Are these all the parks we're supposed to have . . . an industrial park. It sure seems like it in this area," a man observed.

Wootten said council is negotiating for property in the area that would provide a large park.

He asked Lum to confirm this.

"The land we are negotiating will be large enough to put on a recreational facility," Lum answered.

Lawrence Cook, the group's chairman, said residents will continue to press for a compromise.

"We don't want to have to take the whole darned thing (industrial park)," he told Campbell and council members.

'No-No Zone' Knocked

William Head peninsula would be a better site for a camp for under-priviledged children than as a prison, a Seattle engineer has told the Capital Region Board.

Wolf Bauer said using the land for a prison has created what he called a forbidding no-no zone".

"It would seem that such a scenic and adaptable shore resource might be better utilized with public taxes for an under-privileged children's camp, for example, than a habitat for a segment of that adult element for which such surroundings represent anything but a deterrent experience."

Bauer made the comments in a report on a shore-resource study he carried out this summer of the marine shoreline between Wolf Island and Fort Rodd Hill.

His report, commissioned by the board earlier this year, was presented to the CRD zoning and planning committee this afternoon.

Bauer called the 48 miles of peninsula shoreline "a shore-resource of the first order for the province."

His report points out the need to establish management goals for four areas in particular—Parry Bay drift sector, Royal Bay drift sector, Witty's Lagoon and Esquimalt Lagoon.

Bauer said shoreland property owners should be asked to assume stewardship over the preservation of beaches and shorefront.

In exchange, he suggested, they might receive compensatoon in the form of tax relief or some other benefit.

How's That? 17.5 Cents For Coffee?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The average price for a cup of coffee in Victoria is 30 cents but you can pay 40 cents, 17.5 cents or nothing at all.

The free coffee, like most prices, is a bit misleading.

It is at the Empress Hotel dining room and you have to buy a full meal to qualify for it.

The first cup of coffee costs from 20 cents at the fast food shops to 40 cents or more at the expensive restaurants.

However, few customers order only one cup, and that's what confuses the pricing structure.

For example, Hy's Steak House charges 40 cents for the first cup of coffee but a refill is free. That's 40 cents for two cups.

By contrast, low-price coffee shops downtown charge only 25 cent for the first cup but some charge 20 cents for the refill. That's 45 cents for two cups, or a nickel more than at Hy's.

The 17.5 cents a cup is at the Harbour Towers Raven's Dining Room and really comes in the form of two cups for 35 cents.

And the two cups come in Supermug, a special container used to serve coffee in the 7 a.m. to noon period.

From lunchtime on, the regular sized cup is used, again at 35 cents a cup but with unlimited free refills.

The Supermug is practical as well as bargain-priced.

"Most people want a second cup of coffee in the morning and they get both cups in one mug," says waitress Joyce Schoor.

"It saves the waitresses a lot of time. One serving does the job. Occasionally a man will ask for a refill on the large mug. People drink a lot of coffee in the morning."

Over 67 per cent of the day's coffee sales are completed by lunch time.

"After lunch, coffee drinking seems to taper off. That's when we use the smaller cups," she said.

And, contrary to Victoria's international image almost nobody orders tea any more. Tea sales account for only about five per cent of the hot beverages sold during the day.

A survey of city restaurants showed that places that charged the most for the first cup tended to charge the least for refills.

In the middle was Coffee Macs, which charges only 30 cents for the first cup but refills are a dime. Meanwhile, some places charging 35 cents for the first cup offered free refills, reducing the two-cup price to 35 cents.

The survey showed that coffee machine beverages are no bargain for heavy drinkers. At 20 cents a cup, the price is 60 cents for three.

By contrast, three cups of coffee at the Garden Cafe in The Empress would cost only 30 cents because of free refills.

Students, Dog Owners Swell Coffers

A team of seven students contributed $5,100 to Saanich coffers this summer through the collection of overdue dog licence fees.

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton told the finance, legislative and health committee Tuesday the students had collected a record $7,860 in fees, 35 per cent of that ($2,751) being paid to the students as commissions.

Because of the municipal lockout no figures are available for 1975 but in 1974 $2,140 was collected, $1,391 being realized after commissions were paid.

The success of this year's canvass is credited to the students' enthusiasm and the lack of other jobs in the Greater Victoria area for students.

The committee agreed to hold a similar canvass in 1977.

Corporal Sentenced to Year As Lawyer's Leniency Plea Fails

The second of two men involved in mess fund frauds at CFB Esquimalt was dismissed from the armed forces and sentenced to a year in jail Tuesday following his court martial trial.

Cpl. Michael Dalrymple, 30, was found guilty of five charges — stealing and fraud of $255, obtaining liquor by fraud and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline by improper use of bar privilege — all laid under the National Defence Act.

The former vice-president of Club 44 junior ranks mess heard sentence imposed by Cmdr. R. H. Kirby, HMCS Qu'Appelle, president of a three-man disciplinary court martial board.

The court rose shortly after 3.30 and within a few minutes provost officers arrived to escort him to confinement. He will serve his sentence in military detention at Edmonton.

Kirby and the other two members of the board — Lt.-Cmdr. R. F. Archer, HMCS Funday, and Lieut. W. J. E. Fredericks, HMCS Mackenzie — found Dalrymple not guilty of two charges: conspiracy to defraud and improper possession of public property.

Proceedings were stayed on four alternative charges.

During the three-day trial evidence was given by Cpl. Robert Ganner, 32, ex-mess president, who was found guilty of 12 charges and sentenced last week to four years imprisonment with dismissal from the forces.

After giving evidence Ganner was admitted under guard to Naden Hospital for observation, apparently suffering nervous collapse under the stress of his week-long trial and personal upset.

Speaking to sentence Dalrymple's lawyer Alan Bigelow reminded the court of the corporal's clean conduct sheet and good service record, and pointed out he had recently been married.

"Now I want you to think about the Ganner case," Bigelow said. 'Ganner was the heavy."

He said a jail sentence "will not serve the community, the service or the accused," and asked that Dalrymple be made to repay the money. He suggested punishment of a reduction in rank, severe reprimand and a fine "certainly would meet the ends of justice."

Dalrymple could have been sentenced to a maximum two years in jail upon conviction by the disciplinary court martial. Ganner was tried by a general court martial with five officers deliberating.

On Oct. 19 two more men are scheduled to appear before a court martial board involving the junior mess inquiry. They are former serviceman Craig Campbell and M-Cpl. Adolph Plewa, who were mess managers at Club 44.

Saanich Pays Stadium Bill

Saanich's finance, legislative and health committee Tuesday approved payment of the municipality's share toward the 1976-1977 operating costs of the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium.

Saanich's share of the $47,865 to be paid by the four core municipalities is $9,300.

School District 61 also contributes toward operating cost on a usage basis.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What are the current life expectancy figures for Canadian men and women? How do these figures compare with those in the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany? J.W.

A. According to the most recent available figures, The World Almanac and Book of Facts 1976, quotes the United Nations Demographic Year Book of 1974 which states the life expectancy for Canadian adults is 68.75 years. In the U.S. it's 67.4, in Britain, 67.81; France, 68.5; East Germany, 68.85, and West Germany, 67.41. The figures are not broken down into the two sexes.

It's Like This . . . Or Is It?

Ignore that last word on the subject. It's going to be farewell to annual elections in the city of Victoria, and a welcome to the biennial vote . . . or is it?

City council has changed its mind so many times on the issue it's getting to be confusing, and no one could say with any certainty that an apparent change of heart at Tuesday's caucus meeting was indeed that.

But it now seems council intends to rescind the motion it passed last week, which authorized maintenance of the status quo: continuing the present system of annual elections in which half the council is elected each year.

Instead, at next week's formal council meeting a resolution will be presented proposing that candidates elected in next month's civic elections serve for one year only. This would enable adoption of the biennial system in November, 1977, when the electorate would be asked to return a full slate of mayor and eight aldermen.

The only council member still vehemently opposed to the switch on Tuesday was Ald. Bob Ellis, who predicted that biennial elections would foist party politics on Victoria.

Council would find itself "divided into government and opposition," he warned, with all matters being decided along strict party lines instead of aldermen voting according to their individual beliefs and consciences.

New Indian Art Better: Carver

Some old Indian art objects are superb, but as a whole don't match the standard of works by contemporary native artists, says 25-year-old Richard Hunt, who recently became chief carver at Thunderbird provincial park at Douglas and Belleville.

"Actually only the works of a few old craftsmen can compare with the carvings and silver works of our native artists today," he said.

Richard, often called upon to make replicas of old carvings for the Provincial Museum, said the average craftsman of the 19th and the first half of the 20th century made things hurriedly to be used at the moment.

"If he made a mistake or didn't quite complete a carving, no one was really concerned."

As an example, he showed a 75-year-old mask exceedingly well done but for the eyelashes which had been left unfinished.

"No person calling himself an artist would get away with a mask like this today . . . he would lose face," he said. "Today he works to develop his own style and to surpass the old masters."

Richard represents the third generation of carvers at Thunderbord Park belonging to the same family.

He stepped into the shoes of his father, Henry Hunt, recognized as one of the province's great totem pole carvers, and now retired. Henry had succeeded Chief Mungo Martin, who did much to revive native arts and crafts. He was Richard's grandfather.

Richard comes from a family of 13 children and started to carve when he was 15.

"I watched my father and then tried my hand at it," he recalled. "Then one day my mother, Helen, said I would no longer get an allowance. I would have to earn my pocket money by making carvings and selling them. So after school, five days a week, I worked at my craft."

While Richard is well known in Victoria for his exquisite masks, he admits he has much to learn about the arts and crafts of his people.

"I have only made one small totem pole by myself," he said. "All the others I made with my father when I was his assistant at the park."

"The big test will come when I'm asked to carve a big totem pole. I'm sure I can do it, but it will take years before I can become as skilled as my father."

In keeping with the Hunt tradition, Richard said his younger brother Stanley has started to carve. Then of course there is Tony Hunt, the eldest, already a well established artist in Victoria: Alec, also a carver, and a sister, Noreen, a designer.

"I don't have to look for outside competition," he said. "There's plenty within the family."

Weyerhaeuser Scientists Developing 'Super Tree'

By DAVID AMMONS

ROCHESTER, Wash. (AP) — Barrel-chested lumberjacks still clamor over rain-soaked mountains for the Weyerhaeuser Co., but the real kings of the forest are the company's computers and scientists.

With them Weyerhaeuser, world's biggest timber owner (more than 13 billion cubic feet of wood worth $3 billion) is the industry leader in "high-yield forestry."

This means growing trees bigger, taller and more uniform to double wood production.

Scientists have also developed the "super tree" that will grow faster and yield even more wood.

Weyerhaeuser, which likes to advertise itself as "The Tree Growing Co.," is spending about $100 million annually on the program, about twice that of other companies.

Weyerhaeuser scientists began high yield forestry in 1966 and speeded up the program in 1973.

North America uses more than half a ton of wood each year for every man, woman and child. The demand is expected to double by the year 2000.

The $53 billion-a-year forest-products industry of the U.S., with Weyerhaeuser in the lead, believes high-yield forestry will fill the demand.

The program is not without its critics. The Sierra Club and other environmentalists worry about the use of fertilizers, bug sprays and the liquidation of wildlife that interferes with the trees like oats or barley, and there are even whispers that trees nourished artificially might be structurally inferior to natural wood, an allegation dismissed as absurd by forestry company scientists.

In Weyerhaeuser's high-yield program, millions of seedlings start life inside plastic tubes in giant hothouses at Weyerhaeuser's research ranch in Rochester, about 60 miles south of Seattle.

After a few months these "plug" seedlings" go into fields where they are fertilized and thinned to a precise timetable.

Backed by soil data and other studies, Weyerhaeuser planners use computers to project how those trees will grow — and even look — for the next 30 to 50 years.

Other projections calculate the financial returns that can be expected over the years it takes to grow trees.

High yield stands are expected to produce at least twice as much wood as natural forests.

These trees are expected not only to grow taller and straighter than ordinary trees, they are supposed to have fewer, smaller branches. This means they contain more usable fibre.

Through grafting and other ways of producing superior seed, Weyerhaeuser scientists are also souping-up the mainstays of the timber business, Douglas firs and southern pines, into genetically improved super trees.

These man-bred trees should grow faster — and at maturity have at least 20 per cent more fiber than a high-yield tree.

The first super trees have been planted on Weyerhaeuser land in North Carolina.

"Experience so far indicates that this first generation of superior trees will grow 10 to 15 per cent faster than wild trees," says a Weyerhaeuser spokesman at corporate headquarters in Federal Way, between Seattle and Tacoma.

"Within 50 years, the fourth generation should be growing 70 to 100 per cent faster."

It nowtakes 25 to 30 years for a southern pine to reach maturity, about 45 to 50 for a Douglas fir.

In the last three years, Weyerhaeuser cut down about nine million trees. It planted about 400 million, almost all high-yield seedlings.

"Plug" seedlings comprised most of the 4½ million young trees recently planted on 14,000-acres of Crown Zellerbach-managed forests in the Pacific Northwest.

International Paper Co. has its own "super pine tree" and by 1978 plans to replace every southern pine it harvests with these trees. It is also involved in increasing the yields of hardwood trees like gum and sycamore.

The New York City-based company will show a private landowner how to set up a high-yield forest down to how to plant, protect, thin and harvest his trees. There is no charge.

"This way, he can get the most from his forest land — in some cases he can actually double his yield," says a company statement.

"For this help, IP gets the right to buy a landowner's timber at competitive prices."

Canada, U.S. Squabble Over Atlantic Island

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The dust is slowly settling after the latest salvoes from diplomatic big guns but a tiny island in the Atlantic remains untouched, unoccupied and uninhabited, except by a few seals, gulls and lobsters.

It is an island without a country—or, depending upon how you look at it, an island with two countries.

Canada and the United States have been disputing the ownership of Machias Seal Island for almost two centuries.

The island lies between New Brunswick and Maine, part of an archipelago known to Canadians as the Manan Islands.

Confusion over its ownership dates back to the Teaty of Ghent which ended the Revolutionary War.

While the treaty established a demarcation line, somehow the definitin of the U.S. boundary failed to clearly locate Machias Seal Island on one side or the other.

At least, as one U.S. state department official explains it, the demarcation was open to different interpretations.

The long-standing dispute, which had been dormant, has recently flared up again, prompting an exchange of formal diplomatic notes between the two governments.

The state department has been stirred by two developments.

One is the planned extension of seaward boundaries to cope with the new 200-mile fishing zones Canada and the U.S. are to proclaim next year. The other was the filing of a mineral claim on Machias Seal Island by a group of New Brunswickers.

Somewhat alarmed, the state department fired off a note to Ottawa, reminding the Canadian government of "our claim to sovereignty" over the island.

This brought a swift rejoinder in which the Canadian government reasserted its claim to sovereignty.

"We continue to differ," the state department official commented drily.

Although the island is one of half a dozen areas where the Canada-U.S. boundary is contested, nobody seems to know much about it.

Asked for a topographical description, a Canadian official replied: "I don't know. It's just a place we're talking about."

Several U.S. officials were equally vague.

But all agreed it was little more than a rocky pimple in the Atlantic near Grand Manan Island on which the Canadians had built a lighthouse in the mid-19th century.

The lighthouse is now said to be unmanned.

It is, however, of strategic importance because the position of the boundary will determine fishing and mineral rights far out to sea.

Fishing rights as well as boundaries are at present being negotiated by teams of officials from both governments.

It had been hoped to avoid the Machias Seal Island dispute in these negotiations, on the ground that it involved the territorial sea within the three-mile limit.

But the boundaries have to be established 200 miles out to sea from land-based lines.

Besides, the state of Maine, which is concerned about its territorial boundaries, has spent 2½ years working on a legal brief establishing its claim.

But in June, 21 members of the 1958 graduating class of Grand Manan high school decided at a class reunion to attempt a liberation of the island.

Although U.S. officials believe there is nothing of value on or under the little island, the classmates, now scattered around New Brunswick, filed mineral claims which they hope will reinforce Canada's sovereign claim and force a decision on the dispute.

One retaliatory option, which has been mentioned in the U.S., is to sue for possession of the island, presumably through international law.

Although cool heads in the state department maintain that such a course is unlikely.

Buchanan Orders Probe of Lease

OTTAWA (CP) — Judd Buchanan, minister of public works, has ordered a report from departmental officials into the terms of a government lease-purchase agreement with Campeau Corp. of Ottawa for the provision of office space in neighboring Hull, Que.

Ron Huntington, Progressive Conservative MP for the Vancouver riding of Capilano, said last week the government could be paying as much as $508 million during the next 25 years for a project it could build on its own for $140 milion.

A spokesman for Buchanan said Tuesday the minister has discussed the matter with his deputy and other officials but has not determined if an inquiry is needed.

The spokesman said there was no suggestion that any impropriety or illegality was involved.

The Terrasse de la Chaudiere project, now under construction, is to contain a hotel, shopping facilities and a parking garage as well as three office towers. Campeau estimates the total cost at $160 million.

Campeau announced last November the government had tentatively agreed to pay about $14 million a year for the next 25 years with an option to purchase the entire facility for $50 million at the end of that time.

A spokesman for the public works department said Tuesday no agreement has been signed, and indicated the amount of the lease would depend in large measure on the cost of financing.

Huntington said there was no public tendering for the project, which he said is being built on land leased to Campeau at $1 a year by the National Capital Commission the federal agency, which oversees federal properties in the national capital region.

The public works spokesman said such leases are not always put out to tender, and he said the land was assembled by Campeau and was not federally owned as Huntington said.

Huntington said in an interview last Friday he intends to raise the matter next week when the Commons resumes.

Gay Libbers Want To Join Mounties

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian gays are demanding that the RCMP stop discriminating against them both when considering new members for the force and when investigating public servants for security clearances.

In a news release Tuesday, accompanied by a letter to Solicitor-General Francis Fox, the Gay Rights Coalition of Canada is demanding a meeting with Mr. Fox to discuss the matter.

Central to their concern are recent published reports in which an RCMP official said the force looks closely at such things as "character weaknesses — alcoholism, homosexuality and traits such as extreme dependence on one's mother" when considering RCMP applicants.

"It is disgraceful that we should still have to refute the suggestion that homosexuality is a character disorder," said coalition co-ordinator David Garmaise in the news release.

"Homosexuality should not be a factor in employment. Gay people have the right to a job in the RCMP or anywhere in the public service."

Asking how many gay public servants who refused security clearance necessary to jobs or promotions, Mr. Garmaise noted that the RCMP is not required to give its reasons for refusing such a clearance.

"We want assurances from Mr. Fox that homosexuality is not a consideration in the hiring of RCMP officers and in the determination of security clearance for all federal employees," he said.

TAX CLAIM OPEN

OTTAWA (CP) — A Supreme Court of Canada ruling Tuesday paves the way for potash companies to recover taxes paid to the Saskatchewan government if legislation imposing the tax is declared unconstitutional.

In a 9-to-0 decision, the court said legislation preventing recovery of the taxes is ultra vires—beyond the powers of the province to enact.

The case involves 11 potash companies which are challenging the validity of provincial legislation imposing a reserves tax on potash. A Saskatchewan court said it could amount to $120 million a year.

That potash firms' challenge is still before the courts and the Supreme Court said it would have nothing to say about its merits.

But, in the meantime, the companies said they also were concerned over another piece of legislation—the proceedings against the Crown Act — which they said bars recovery of taxes they have paid even if the mineral taxation legislation is declared unconstitutional by the courts.

Canada Appears Stuck with Quang

OTTAWA (CP) — All indications point to Canada being stuck with Dan Van Quang, the Vietnamese general of ill repute, for some time to come.

In fact unless there are developments that neither Canadian nor U.S. authorities here are aware of, there is a possibility the man who has been accused of corruption and involvement in the drug trade in his land may be in Canada indefinitely.

Despite a year-old deportation order, there seems no place to send him — not even Vietnam. He has become a man without a country.

Gen. Quang arrived in Montreal in May, 1975, from the United States, one more refugee from the fall of the U.S.-backed regime in what was then South Vietnam.

After a controversy developed about his background then-immigration minister Robert Andras revoked a special one-year ministerial permit under which he entered Canada.

The minister said he had concluded that accusations against Gen. Quang were well founded and that the general, an adviser to the South Vietnamese government on internal security, was an undesirable person.

The general was allowed to remain in the country until he foun a place to go. The government expressed reluctance about sending him to an uncertain fate at the hands of the new rulers of South Vietnam.

Quang

Canadians who briefed reporters last week on a visit here of a delegation from the newly-unified country of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam said the republic has made it clear it will not accept Gen. Quang.

An immigration department spokesman said this week there are only two countries to which Quang can be legally deported — Vietnam or the United States from where he came to Canada. The former doesn't want him and the latter has shown reluctance to accept him.

MP Pressures Keep Bases Open

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Under political and economic pressures from different regions the number of armed forces bases in Canada that were to be closed, has been reduced, it was learned today.

A revised defence paper with recommended closures of bases has been prepared to go before a committe of cabinet prior to the recommendations going to the whole cabinet.

Defence Minister James Richardson earlier this year took the original plan for closing several bases to a cabinet committee.

Word of the proposals leaked out to different areas and protests were raised in parliament and in the Liberal caucus.

The working paper was redrafted this summer after consideration by the cabinet committee. The new proposals are now in final form and ready for consideration again by the cabinet committee.

Members of parliament made representations to have the armed forces bases in their various areas kept operating.

DESTROYERS PROMOTED

MONTREAL (CP) — A ship-building program to equip the Canadian navy with a modern class of destroyers for coastal patrol is urgently needed in view of the Soviet Union's recent naval buildup, Vice-Admiral D. S. Boyle said Tuesday.

The vice-admiral said no decision has been made yet on exact specifications for a new ship.

Naval and defence department sources agree that if any ships are built, they will probably be smaller and lighter than the present destroyer class.

Strike Looms

EDMONTON (CP) — City Commissioner Doug Burrows repeated the city's offer of a wage increase of 10.2 per cent for inside civic employees Tuesday, but the workers continued to prepare for a city-wide strike at midnight tonight.

Alex Szchechina, business agent fo Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 52, told about 1,000 city hall workers attending a special meeting of the union that Burrows made the offer by telephone.

He said the city also said it would consider changing the effective date of the contract by four days, to April 4 instead of March 31, which the union said would then allow a maximum 12.4-per-cent increase under federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Discrimination Hits Pakistanis

TORONTO (CP)—Discrimination against Pakistanis in Canada is increasing, says an officer of the Ontario Human Rights Commission.

"They are being harassed and spat upon," said Beverly Johnson. "There are assaults. Some are saying they've been here for eight to 10 years and they've never had any trouble. Now they don't know what to do. they're afraid to let their children out."

The harrassment is not confined to Pakistanis. In January, a Tanzania man was beaten in a subway by three youths who were drunk. Both of Shamshudin Kanui's legs were broken and he spent four months in hospital. He will not be able to walk without crutches until next year.

The commission is investigating half a dozen complaints by East Asians that they are being forced to move because neighborhood bigots are harassing them.

A 40-year-old Toronto East Indian told the commission that white teen-agers have terrorized him for the last year and a half.

The windows of his house have been broken six or seven times and his car has been damaged by vandals twice. He has received daily obscene phone calls and his house has been splattered with rotten eggs.

The teen-agers beat him and he was taken to hospital for treatment for cuts and bruises.

The victims are often children. Twelve-year-old Nassir Basith was attacked near his North York home in February by three men. They hit him, threw him to the ground and rubbed snow in his face, calling him a "dirty Paki."

"Part of the reason for the attacks is the stereotype that Pakistanis are passive, don't respond to provocation, and are easy-going," said Miss Johnson.

"But people had better think again. From the people I've spoken to, they're saying if the police don't act, they will take action themselves. They're becoming more aggressive."

Mahmood Khan, chairman of the 3,000-member Association of Pakistani Canadians, said the association is trying to educate Canadians, making them understand Pakistani culture.

After a Toronto Sikh temple was damaged by vandals, it was opened to the neighborhood for a multicultural festival. "They found out these other cultures aren't scary," said Howard Jones, a commission community relations officer. After the festival, the vandalism subsided.

MORE BABIES, AUSSIES TOLD

SYDNEY (Reuter) — White Australians have been warned they face a dim future unless they produce more babies.

"Perhaps in 50 years time there will be very few of us," says a gynecologist, Dr. William McBride.

"I hope we do not dispose of the race," he said, following a parliamentary report that Australia is in a period of significant fertility decline.

The government report said the national birthrate has slumped to a long-term no-growth level.

Immigration Minister Michael MacKeller also told Parliament that the immigration flow which had boosted the country's population by more than three million since 1945 has declined dramatically.

For the first time a net loss in migration was recorded last year — down by more than 5,000, and falling.

"This is a remarkable situation," McKellar said. "There has been no other year since 1947 when the net excess of arrivals over departures has been less than 28,000."

Glacier-Fed Pool Heated by the Sun

LILLOOET, B.C. (CP) — Ron Purvis had a glacier-fed swimming pool but was unwilling to pay for a high-priced commercial water heater. So he developed a solar water heater.

"I was prompted by desperation and necessity," he explained. "The water in my pool was 46 degrees Fahrenheit."

Mr. Purvis spent a couple of years developing the heater, doing a lot of reading about solar energy.

He said even with the less than ideal amount of sunshine this year, the home-made solar water heater keeps the pool at 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Mr. Purvis had estimated a commercial heater would cost $1,000. The home-made device cost about $70.

Although similar to other solar energy devices, plastic tubing is used in his heater, rather than copper pipe. Mr. Purvis said he has orchards so has lots of plastic tubing around.

WHAT MANKIND THINKS ABOUT ITSELF

Recently, George Gallup, with the help of a world-wide network of pollsters, conducted the first global public opinion poll. The results, some of which may surprise you, are in the October Issue of Reader's Digest. For example, Japan, one of the world's most pious countries 25 years ago, is now the most agnostic of all countries surveyed. Canada, on the other hand, is one of the world's most religious. The most important of all Gallup polls, What Mankind Thinks About Itself, is just one of 34 articles and features in the October issue of Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

Look Who's Leading the League!

By The Canadaian Press

It may not last long, but this morning Colorado Rockies and Washington Capitals are on top the hockey world.

The Rockies and Capitals, odds-on favorites to be National Hockey League doormats again this year, won the 1976-77 NHL openers Tuesday night to claim top spots in their division standings.

Colorado goalie Doug Favell, who fell from favor with Toronto Maple Leafs, stoned his old team-mates as the Rockies stunned the Leafs 4-2 in the first NHL game ever played in Denver.

At Landover, Md., a power-play goal by Hartland Monahan with less than two minutes to play gave the Capitals a 6-5 win over Atlanta Flames.

Favell, who lost his starting job two years ago because of a back injury and was relegated to third-string status and near-oblivion last season, was sold to the Rockies on the opening day of the Leafs training camp.

Favell blocked 39 shots, 18 of them in the first period when the Rockies were building a 2-1 lead. He left the game for four minutes in the third period because of leg cramps but came back to finish up.

Right winger Wilf Paiement came up with a goal for the Rockies and drew assists on goals by Larry Skinner and Dave Hudson. Nelson Pyatt was the other Colorado scorer while Errol Thompson and Bob Neely scored a goal each for Toronto. The Rockies, who struggled through two seasons in Kansas City as the Scouts, attracted 7,359 fans to their opener.

The Scouts and Capitals, who joined the NHL in the last expansion round, have rarely been out of their division basements. Between them, the two teams won just 49 of 320 league games.

Monahan's goal, his second of the night, enabled the Capitals to match the longest winning streak in their history—one game.

A hooking penalty against Atlanta's Bill Clement, a former Washington player who had a goal and an assist, enabled Monahan to cash in on the power play after three previous failures.

"We spent so much time in training camp looking at all our players, we didn't work enough on power plays, killing penalties, or getting the puck out of our end," said McVie. "And, we looked bad in all departments tonight."

Harvey Bennett, Gerry Meehan, Jack Lynch and Guy Charron were other Washington scorers. Hilliard Graves scored twice and Guy Chouinard, Ken Houston and Clement one each for the Flames.

Hilliard Graves scored twice for Atlanta, which outshot Washington 35-22. In the final period, the Caps scored on half of their four shots.

Atlanta coach Fred Creighton was in a foul mood after the defeat.

"We played a fair game but they capitalized on their chances better than we did — and we had a lot more chances," he said.

Six more teams open their schedules tonight. Vancouver Canucks are at Pittsburgh Penguins, Log Angeles Kings at Cleveland Barons and Minnesota North Stars at New York Rangers.

SQUEEZE-PLAY VICTIM in first period of National Hockey League game Tuesday at Landover, Md., is Harvey Bennett of Washington Capitals. Rey Comeau (18) bounces Bennett into boards as Atlanta clubmate Bill Flett watches rolling puck. Bennett scored once as Capitals jolted Flames with 6-5 win.

ATHLETICS WIN IN THRILLER

Victoria Athletics captured the McGavin Cup on sudden-death penalty kicks Tuesday before about 500 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

Athletics and Canadian champion Victoria West battled to a 2-2 deadlock in regulation time and then went scoreless through two 15-minute overtime periods.

Each team needed six penalty kicks before the contest was decided 6-5 in favor of Athletics.

Joe Mendonco, a rookie who scored the winning goal for Oak Bay says in a Greater Victoria High School League match during the afternoon, connected for the winning goal on the first sudden-death penalty shot awarded Athletics.

Steve Moss scored to give Victoria West a 1-0 lead at half time and Mike Sails boosted that margin one more before Athletics got untracted back on the track.

George Pakos cut the margin to one at 68 minutes and Bob Bolitho got the equalizer on a penalty shot only seven minutes later.

Athetics were forced to play shorthanded when Garnett Moen was sent off after a dispute with the referee at 89 minutes but Wests couldn't take advantage of the opportunity.

Sails, Moss and John McGuire scored for Victoria West when the five mandatory penalty shots were awarded after the scoreless overtime sessions but Greg Booth blasted his shot over the net and Ted Van Waes blocked Ralph Anderson's drive.

Pakos, Bolitho and Mike Allabarton connected for Athletics while Jim de Goede blocked a shot by Frank Woods and Howie Anderson lofted his shot over the bar.

Then came the sudden-death kicks. Gary McLaren missed the net for Victoria West and set the stage for Mendonco.

Penalties Hurt Again

SASKATOON — Victoria Cougars, travelling Prairie roads this week, are finding penalties can be rougher than potholes.

The Cougars stumbled on their own sins for a third straight game Monday when Saskatoon Blades scored six power-play goals to defeat Victoria 7-1 in a hard-hitting Western Canada Hockey League game before 2,488 fans.

The Cougars opened an 11-game road trip by defeating Regina Pats 9-2 but then said "ouch" to Winnipeg Monarchs (5-1) and Brandon Wheat Kings (8-5) before coming to Saskatoon.

Penalties have hurt Victoria in each of its last three games. Cougars gave up two power-play goals to Winnipeg, both at a time when the game had to be considered still in doubt, and four short-handed goals in Brandon.

Saskatoon, admittedly with a smart power-play attack, scored their first six goals while enjoying a manpower advantage and then added insult by scoring the final one while playing shorthanded.

The Cougars, nonetheless, played well. Goaltender Murray Bannerman stood out for Victoria but suffered with his support. Victoria defencemen were guilty of numerous mistakes and their inconsistency is the big reason Cougars have given up 20 goals in their last three games.

Referee Ian Sandercock dished out 31 penalties in the sometimes-chippy affair. Cougars were assessed 14 minors, two of three majors a misconduct and a game misconduct. Saskatoon took 12 minors, including six in the final period, and one major.

The most damaging penalty was a major called against Victoria rookie Kevin Clackson for high-sticking Saskatoon's Robb MacFarlane. Cougars trailed 2-1 at that stage, late in the second, and were still very much in the game.

Before Clackson returned, Ken Federko and Darryl Erickson both scored to run Saskatoon's lead to 4-1.

Federko and Erickson, a pair of rookies in coach Jack McLeod's lineup, finished with two goals apiece while MacFarlane, Stan Gulutzan and Bruce Hamilton added singles.

Saskatoon goalie Dave Parro made 28 stops, two more than Bannerman.

Cougars continue their 13-day journey by meeting the Bombers in Flin Flon tonight and again on Thursday.

Earlier Tuesday, Saskatoon dealt veteran goalie Randy Ireland to Portland Winter Hawks. Entering his fourth season, Ireland had asked to be traded to a team needing "a fulltime goalie" rather than spend the season alternating with Parro.

Portland has given up 33 goals in losing all five of its games.

Cowboys or Blazers, Who Cares?

By The Canadian Press

Calgary Cowboys returned to their old Vancouver stamping grounds Tuesday night, but nobody seemed to care.

Only 1,500 fans paid their way into the 15,600-seat Pacific Coliseum to watch the Cowboys trim Winnipeg Jets 6-1 in a World Hockey Association exhibition game.

The Coliseum was familiar territory for the Cowboys, who spent two seasons there as Vancouver Blazers before they moved to Calgary last season.

In Tuesday's other WHA exhibitions, Quebec Nordiques dropped Indianapolis Racers 6-2 and Birmingham Bulls defeated Charlotte Checkers of the Southern Hockey League 3-1.

Right-wingers Danny Lawson and Warren Miller scored two goals each for the Cowboys. Rick Jodzio and Peter Driscoll were the other Calgary scorers.

Bill Lesuk deprived Calgary goaltender Don McLeod of a shutout in the final period after the Jets slumbered through their opening period without managing a shot on goal.

Serge Bernier's second-period goal snapped a 2-2 tie and Quebec Nordiques scored three more in the final period to beat the Racers.

Ken Boyer Making a Bid After Red Gets the Axe

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Boyer, an old St. Louis Cardinals baseball hero, says he has asked to be considered for the position of team manager.

But Boyer, 45, currently the field boss of the Cardinals top farm club, says a successor to Red Schoendienst may be chosen from outside the organization.

Boyer talked Tuesday with club president August Busch, following the firing of Schoendienst by the National League baseball team.

"I think he may even have been startled that I asked but I just wouldn't want to live with myself this winter if they went out and hired somebody else without my having asked."

Cardinals general manager Bing Devine said Boyer's name is on a list of three candidates he has submitted to Busch.

"Boyer is not in any better position than any of the others," Devine said. "He is not the heir apparent. No one else from the organization is on that list."

Boyer, the National League's most valuable player in 1964, played 16 seasons in the major leagues, including 11 at third base for St. Louis.

Since retiring as a player in 1969 he has managed at three minor league levels in the Cards' chain, including the last three at Tulsa of the American Association.

Busch, 77, said in a statement the decision not to rehire Schoendienst, 53, was based on "our consensus that there is a need for a change."

Schoendienst had managed the Cardinals since 1965, twice leading them to National League pennants and once to a World Series title during his 12 seasons.

"If you've got the ball players you can manage," he said, alluding to St. Louis' skid during the past season to 72-90, the club's worst record since 1955.

Devine said an evaluation of the three candidates to succeed Schoendienst would begin immediately but noted "we have no timetable."

BY ANY OTHER NAME SHE'S STILL A DANDY

Owned and handled by Charlie Hill of Bellevue, Wash., the six-year-old female black Labrador has captured an unprecedented triple crown in retriever trials.

Winner earlier this year of the U.S. national open and U.S. national amateur crowns, Wanapum Darts Dandy was judged the 1976 Canadian national champion last weekend.

On the 54 dogs competing in the Canadian trials near here, only five completed the 10 tests. The order of finishing for the other four is not customarily released.

Besides the champion, others finishing the event included two Brandon dogs — 1975 champion Pelican Lake Petty Two and Charming Lady.

The other finalists were Wanapum Darts, Garbo and Hiwood Piper. Garbo, a little sister of Dandy, is from Bellevue and Piper is from Anchorage, Alaska.

Phillies Won't Change

By The Canadian Press

Manager Danny Ozark of Philadelphia Phillies has definite ideas on how to approach baseball's best-of-five playoff series to decide on the Woird Series opponents. Just play it like a regular season game, he says.

"You have to take the same outlook that you had all year," Ozark said Tuesday at a workout in preparation for Saturday's National League playoff opener with Cincinnati Reds.

"You have to forget that it's a short series. The main thing is to execute fundamentals the way you have all year."

Ozark dismissed a suggestion that the Reds are better equipped to handle the inherent pressures of the playoffs, being old hands at post-season competition. It will be the first playoffs for the Phillies.

"If a player isn't nervous he doesn't belong on this ballclub," Ozark declared. "It's no more than like opening day.

"Cincinnati will be just as nervous as we are, I don't care how many times you do it. I think players thrive on pressure. They get stronger, run faster, throw harder."

Meanwhile, Reds manager Sparky Anderson is giving the Phillies something to think about. He's put a top secret stamp on his pitching plans for this weekend's National League playoffs.

Anderson says he will not name his starting pitcher until Friday night, less than 24 hours before the best-of-five showdown gets under way in Philadelphia.

"I know right now who it will be, but I'm not saying," Anderson said Tuesday as the National League West champions returned to work after a day off. "I'll name all three Friday."

Ozark has named veteran lefthander Steve Carlton, 20-7, as opening-game pitcher for the Phillies.

Flyer Woes Mount

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — With their National Hockey League opener just one day away, the goaltending woes of Philadelphia Flyers are mounting.

One day after Bernie Parent was shelved with a broken toe, the team suspended Wayne Stephenson, 31.

Then Stephenson, who played 66 games for the Flyers when Parent was injured last year, complicated matters by declaring himself a free agent.

"He is a free agent because the Flyers breached his contract by failing to renegotiate as they promised," Stephenson's agent Mark Stewart said Tuesday.

The statement came after a meeting with Flyers general manager Keith Allen, who had announced the suspension.

The suspension takes effect Thursday, the day the Flyers open their regular season against New York Islanders.

The Flyers called up goalie Jerome Mrazek from their Springfield, Mass., farm club of the American League to back up Gary Inness, who will see the bulk of the action until Parent returns in about four to six weeks.

Inness was acquired in a trade with Pittsburgh Penguins last year.

The Stephenson situation, which had been heating up since training camp began, boiled over Tuesday when his agent told the club Stephenson would not play unless he had a new contract.

Stephenson said the Flyers had promised to renegotiate his existing three-year contract and he refused to report to camp unless they did.

The Flyers said they never promised to revise the contract and branded him a holdout. The club fined Stephenson $250 a day for the 17 days he missed.

Stephenson's bill totalled $4,250 when he finally reported to training camp last Saturday. The club said the fine would stick and there would be no renegotiation of the contract.

Last year, when Parent was sidelined by a neck injury, Stephenson was pressed into service. He responded by playing in 66 games, winning 40 of them and leading the Flyers into the Stanley Cup playoffs for the third year in a row.

Allen announced that he would reinstitute the $250-a-day absentee penalty for each remaining day of training camp missed by Stephenson.

DETROIT LIONS PICK HUDSPETH

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Tommy Hudspeth, the surprise choice Tuesday to replace Rick Forzano as interim head coach of Detroit Lions, expects the team to get back to basics in as effort to get back into its divisional race in the National Football League.

"My philosophy is very simple," he told a news conference. "You gotta be able to block, tackle and execute. We have to have an attacking defence, a gambling defence. We've got that. But we don't have it on offence."

Hudspeth, 45, joined the Lions as a scout in November, 1974, after leaving Chicago Fire of the old World Football League, where he was offensive backfield coach.

He was promoted to Detroit's co-ordinator of personnel and scouting in July, 1975, and club-owner William Clay Ford announced Tuesday that Hudspeth would be "interim" head coach.

Forzano resigned Monday in the wake of the Lions' 24-14 upset loss to Green Bay on Sunday which dropped Detroit's record to 1-3.

TORONTO (CP) — Four players with Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League were remanded Tuesday to Oct. 19 for preliminary hearing on various charges of assault.

Austin Cooper, lawyer for the four, asked in provincial court that bench warrants, to be exercised with discretion against the players, be continued until that date. The warrants were issued Sept. 21.

Something for Every Skier

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Magnificent seems an apt but almost inadequate term to describe the proposed ski development site on 5,215-foot Mt. Washinton, located approximately 14 miles northwest of Courtenay.

Alex Linton, who has been skiing for an impressive 42 years, and Henry Norie, both from Campbell River, are in the midst of final negotiations with Crown Zellerbach to lease approximately 700 acres on the southwestern face of the mountain

Agreement was reached "in principle" late last month and some preliminary work has started on what promises to be the best ski area on Vancover Island.

Linton took us on a quick tour of the area Saturday, including a climb of about 1,400 feet up a 45-degree slope to the top of the mountain, where one is greeted by a panoramic view of Powell River, Courtenay, the Comox Glacier, several lakes on top of Forbidden Plateau and the interior mountains of Strathcona Park.

Initial plans call for two chair lifts to be built — one 1,800 feet long (350 feet vertical) and the other about 4,000 feet in length (1,250 vertical). The long chair would rise to a spot near the top of the mountain.

The starting capacity of 1,500 skiers per day and a combined vertical distance of 1,550 feet compares favorably with any other area in the Pacific Northwest.

The slopes served by these first lifts will offer terrain ranging from the gentlest grade for beginners to pitches guaranteed to challenge the most ardent expert.

There will be terraced parking for about 1,300 vehicles and about 85 acres has been designated for accomodation.

There will be room for approximately 100 fully-serviced chalets and several condominiums. Chalets sites will be scattered at about four per acre and groups of 15 to 20 can be expected to share common parking lots.

Some room has also been set aside for unserviced (wilderness type) chalets and all facilities will have to adhere to a building code.

In addition to boasting a great potential for alpine skiing, Mt. Washington's proximity to Forbidden Plateau makes it an ideal jumping-off spot for cross-country ski trips into Paradise Meadows and both Battleship and Helen MacKenzie lakes.

It serves as a summer staging area for hikers now and there must have been at least 20 vehicles parked along the road near the trailhead last Saturday — despite the wet weather that prevailed Friday night and Saturday morning.

This winter, developers will be doing further studies and on snow depths, wind and climate. They will also draw up final plans for presentation to the regional board and the provincial pollution control branch.

If these hurdles are cleared satisfactorily, the footings for the lift towers could be in place by the end of next summer and work on the day lodge — which will probably house a restaurant, ski skool and rental facilities — could be well underway.

Linton said plans are to make as little impact on the terrain as possible — keeping roads and tree-cutting to a minimum.

Al Raine, former national ski coach and now the provincial ski co-ordinator, was impressed with the area after conducting a survey of various Island mountains last year.

"Mt. Washington looked to me like it could become the leading ski facility on Vancouver Island," he said in a recent telephone conversation.

A large amount of intermediate terrain to suit "about 80 per cent of the people who ski", relatively easy road access and the possibility of an on-mountain ski village base were among the positive factors influencing his opinion.

He also noted that Courtenay would benefit from both the existing facilities at Forbidden Plateau and any development on Washington. They would tend to compliment rather than detract from each other, he said.

The only real negative factor Raine could come up with was the area's distance from the major centre of population on the southern end of the Island.

But this writer is willing to bet a lot fewer skiers will be making weekend trips to Whistler or Mt. Baker this coming season because of the ferry fee increases. Those few extra miles of driving could never equal the cost of even a one-way trip to the Mainland.

So the added area at Mt. Washington will be most welcome.

Roadrunners Get Praise, Then Defeat

It was justified during Greater Victoria High School Soccer League play Tuesday afternoon,

"You'll hear a lot more from Reynolds before the season's over," he said prior to a game between the two schools.

"You'll have to with all that talent."

Roadrunners, who have seven players competing in the Premier Divison of the Vancouver Island Leage, then dropped a hard-fought 2-1 decision to Bays.

The win, eked out with 15 minutes to go on a goal by Joe Mendonca, kept Bays two points back of leading Spectrum, which posted a 10-1 decision over St. Michael's University School.

In other matches, Victoria and Esquimalt battled to a 1-1 deadlock, Claremont and Parkland tied 4-4 and Mt. Douglas defeated Belmont, 3-1.

At Reynolds, Lou Garraway was credited with a goal when an Oak Bay defender kicked the ball over his goaltender's outstretched arms on an attepted pass-back.

Louis DeFrias scored the qualizer about 15 minutes into the second half and set the stage for Mendonca.

John Bridge scored for Victoria and Mark Hackwell replied for Esquimalt.

At Claremont, Dave Spoor connected on two penalty shots, Gordie Lee scored on a direct free kick and Joe McAllister also scored to give the home team a 4-1 advantage at half time. Avie Stubbington and Darryl Stubbs each scored twice for Parkland.

Tim Elwell (2) and Rex Craig scored for Mt. Douglas and Bruce McChesney averted a shutout for Belmont.

Ref Ejects Fulham Ace

LONDON (Reuter) — Former England skipper Bobby Moore of Fulham was sent off for only the second time in his career at Bolton as the English soccer clubs battled to a 2-2 tie in extra time Tuesday in an effort to reach the last 16 in Cup play.

Bolton tied the score in the 90th minute — a goal which brought fierce protests from Moore and Fulham manager Alec Stock.

Stock led his players off the field and when they finally returned, Moore was missing. It was learned later that referee Keven McNally had sent him off for dissent.

In a Division Two match last Saturday, Fulham had Irish International George Best sent off against Cup holders Southampton.

Meanwhile, Manchester City moved to the top of the first Division with a 2-2 draw at Everton. However, the leading two clubs in the Second Division both lost, Chelsea dropping a 2-1 decision away to Bristol Rovers and Wolverhampton Wanderers getting beaten 6-2 at home to Southampton.

Brighton scored seven second-half goals to blank Walsall 7-0 and regain first place in Division Three. Last month, Brighton scored seven goals against York.

Surprise Element's Out As New Track Coach In

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Track and Field Association announced Tuesday that Gerard Mach has been appointed head coach responsible for the national team program.

CFTA executive-director Ken Twigg made the announcement, partially in response to Mach's statement during the weekend that he was surprised his new job had not been announced.

Twigg said the delay was the result of CFTA efforts to confirm several appointments and when he explained the situation to Mach the former Polish Olympian was satisfied.

Mach will retain his position as national sprints coach. He will be responsible for co-ordinating domestic and international competition and will supervise the other three national coaches. As head coach his salary is paid by the O'Keefe Sports Foundation.

National distance coach Paul Poce and national throwing coach Jean-Paul Baert are staying with the association and Lyle Sanderson of Saskatoon will be the interim jump coach on a volunteer basis replacing Derek Boosey who has gone to Saudi Arabia.

Twigg also said the association is looking for a technical co-ordinator to handle administration of the CFTA's programs plus a co-ordinator for the coaching certification program.

Twigg also said the CFTA has solved the massive financial problems it faced at the start of the year. Through some budget cuts plus assistance from the provincial branches, the Canadian Olympic Association, the Olympic Trust, donations and money from a benefit concert by singer Gordon Lightfoot, a $600,000 deficit has been overcome.

"I plan to work with coaches and hope to be able to organize the Canadian coaches from the bottom to the top," Mach said.

Mach said he wants to establish some clubs where specialty coaches will work with athletes while other clubs will have general coaching. Specialty coaches will be available to the general clubs when they are needed, he said.

He said one of his goals will be to make better use of university facilities and their training programs.

NEW MARK BY PACER

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jade Prince, a two-year-old son of Meadow Skipper, raced the fastest mile in harness racing history Tuesday, timed in 1:54 1-5 in the $62,755 Fayette Pace at the Red Mile Raceway. Driven by Jack Kopas of London, Ont., Jade Prince scored in he first heat in 1:55 1-5 before setting the all-time record. The old mark of 1:54 3-5 was set by Albatross as a four-year-old in 1972 at Sportsmen's Park in Chicago and equalled by Tauros Bomber as a three-year-old earlier this year at Springfield, Ill.

NEW TAX REFORM LAW HITS BETTING

Bonanza for the Bookies?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Horse racing officials are predicting an increase in betting with bookmakers because of a provision of the new tax reform law which calls for withholding of 20 per cent on racetrack winnings over $1,000.

Racing officials also say the measure, which was signed by President Ford on Monday, will create huge amounts of paperwork for the tracks.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., led an unsuccessful effort to amend the bill before Congress adjourned last week. Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said it was a mistake to crack down on big winners at the track.

Long's committee proposed a change to apply the withholding feature to winnings of more than $600, but only on payoffs with odds of at least 200 to 1. The idea, which would have eliminated withholding for nearly all wagers, never made it to the floor of Congress and it will be at least January, when Congress returns, before it can be considered.

Arnold Kirkpatrick, secretary of the racing advisory committee of the American Horse Council, said "I'm afraid it will create de facto tax evaders."

A Santa Anita track official said, "I think logically it would drive a great many people to illegal wagering. We haven't even begun to figure out the paperwork. It would be gigantic."

The tax reform law also requires withholding from state lottery payoffs above $5,000 and from any other gambling winnings of more than $1,000 where the odds were at least 300 to 1. Slot machines, keno and bingo are exempt.

The measure takes effect in 90 days.

Sen. Long contended that the Internal Revenue Service doesn't have the manpower to handle the withholding problem at tracks.

He said he hopes to get the law amended "before the Kentucky Derby next year, because it will create some confustion."

Task of Rebuilding Expos Handed to Dick Williams

MONTREAL (UPI) — Iron-fisted disciplinarian Dick Williams was named manager Tuesday of the Montreal Expos, who finished the regular season two days ago with the worst record in major league baseball.

"Dick Williams is a guy who knows how to win and he will be an attraction here," Expos president John McHale said in making the announcement.

Williams replaces Charlie Fox, who took over from Karl Kuehl during the 1976 season. Fox now becomes vice president of operations and assumes the duties of general manager. Jim Fanning, now the vice president of player personnel, was given the job of vice president in charge of player personnel, was given the job of fice president in charge of player development.

Williams, who once served as a third-base coach with the Expos, was fired in mid-season by the California Angels amid player discontent.

Williams said he was happy with his two-year contract with the Expos and was glad to be back in Montreal.

"I've been pretty successful since leaving here, if you can just forget about the last two seasons," he said. Williams managed Oakland to the world series championship in 1972 and 1973.

"I will do my best to put the best players on the field. We will go after the best two free agents we can get (in the November draft)," he said, "and then we'll sell them on the advantage of playing baseball here."

Fox said the Expos were in the market for a power hitter and a second baseman. He said, however, if Tim Foli converts to second base from shortstop, then the club may be looking for a shortstop instead.

Charles Bronfman, principal owner and board chairman of the club, predicted brighter prospects for the team. The Expos had a 55-107 record in 1976.

"You may say the last two years have been disappointing on the field, but now I feel that the fiture will be rosy," Bronfman said. "I do not say these things in jest."

Williams' days with Oakland highlight his record, but he quit in 1973 in a personality conflict with abrasive Charles Finley, the club's owner.

Williams attempted to sign with the New York Yankees but Finely insisted Williams fulfil the remaining two years of his contract. Finley's position later was upheld by then-American League president Joe Cronin.

Williams instead elected to sit out the first half of 1974 until Finely finally relented and let Williams go to the out-of-contention California Angels.

The Angels became the second team to fire Williams for his failure to get along with players. In 1969, he was fired by the Boston Red Sox, who he had managed to an American League pennant, amid player dissension over discipline.

When Williams left the Angels this year, a player remarked that he "should have worn Nazi swastikas on his collar."

Another player, Frank Tanana, said, "he had absolutely no communication with the players. He had the players uptight. It's a lot easier to get guys to play for you if you show you care a little about them."

The Angels' discontent brewed so strongly that at one point it flared into open rebellion aboard a team bus, with the players siding with veteran Bill Melton in a dispute where the two almost came to blows.

He was fired shortly after the Melton incident, but again Williams wasn't chastened. He said of the Angels' management: "There were thoughts on what was best for the organization. I obviously was taking an alternate route."

McHale said he had been interested in Williams since he became available, but only began negotiations with him in the past 10 days.

DICK WILLIAMS
. . . knows tow to win

"We have a winning manager and a new winning stadium," McHale said, referring to the 70,000-seat stadium built for the Olympic Games.

"It is difficult to say how soon we will win the championship," McHale said. "We have many young players who will get better in a hurry."

SHOCKER FOR PADRES

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The baseball future of Randy Jones, the National League's winningest pitcher in 1976, was a question mark Tuesday with the discovery of a detached bicep tendon in his pitching arm.

The announcement that Jones will undergo surgery Thursday stunned the left-handed hurler and his manager of San Diego Padres.

If we lose him, it will be an awful blow," said John McNamara who was rehired Monday for the 1977 season."

Jones, 26, San Diego's first 20-game winner ever last year and 22-14 this season, is a prime candidate for the Cy Young award. He was nosed out by New York Mets' Tom Seaver last year.

In a game against Cincinnati last week, Jones was takn out because of a suspected muscle pull in his arm. But orthopedic surgeon Frank Jobe inspected it Sunday and found Jones unable to make a muscle in his clenched left fist.

A feel of "a tear in my left forearm" was reported by Jones at the time of the injury.

"Dr. Jobe said he didn't know if I would be able to pitch again," Jones said.

Another surgeon, Dr. Robert Kerlan, said the injury is rare for a pitcher and "it is a definite threat to Randy's future capabilities."

AMERICANS FAVORED IN WORLD GOLF TEST

VILAMOURA, Portugal (Reuter) — The United States was favored to win the Espirito Santo Trophy for the sixth consecutive time when the world women's amateur golf championship started today on the 6,181-yard, par-73 Vilamoura course.

The Americans are represented by Debbie Massey, making her fourth appearance in the tournament that is held every second year, and newcomers Donna Horton, the U.S. amateur champion, and Nancy Lopez.

Canada is represented by Dale Shaw of Sidney, B.C., Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver and Betty Cole of Edmonton.

Teams of three from 25 countries will play 72 holes with the best two scores for each round counting in a team's daily total.

Britain and Ireland, playing as a single team, South Africa and France are regarded as the main challengers to U.S. supremacy, with Taiwan rated a chance on the strength of form in practice rounds.

Originally 27 teams were entered but Puerto Rico and Jamaica failed to show.

Murray Scores As Rookie Pilot

Murray Kenneth couldn't offer help as a player but tendered contribution as a coach as Victoria Maple Leafs recorded a winning debut in the Big Six Hockey League.

A former professional with San Diego and Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association, Kenneth wasn't able to play because his amateur reinstatement hasn't been approved.

Named interim coach of the South Island League's newest entry, Kennett handled Leafs on the bench as they rallied for a 8-6 victory over Lake Cowichan Lakers at Esquimalt Sports centre on Tuesday.

Leafs trailed 5-4 heading into the final period.

Eight players shared Leaf scoring. Les Bergman, Bob Martin, Bill Gidden, Chris Riddell, Kerry Brewster, Dave Wilson, Al McLaren and Pat Buchar each scored once.

Doug Hanna was a standout for the Lakers with four goals while Vern McDougall and Lindsay Pomeroy scored the others for Lakers in the evenly-matched encounter.

Dale Truitt and Brett Kneen combined to stop 43 shots for Lakers while Victoria's Ken Olson turned away the same amount.

Snipers Divide Beirut

BEIRUT (Reuters) — The Arab League has threatened to withdraw its peacekeeping forces from a truce zone in central Beirut following sniper fire which forced the closure of the only crossing point between the zones of the city controlled by leftists and rightists.

Even the Arab League's special envoy, Hassan Sabri al-Kholi, had to turn back at the museum crossing point Tuesday as he tried to cross from leftist territory to the rightists' area for a meeting with President Elias Sarkis.

Kholi later said the closure of the crossing point was a step away from peace, and threatened to withdraw the Sudanese Army contingent which has tried to maintain a truce zone around the museum area since July.

Leftist militiamen who control the western end of the crossing declared it closed on Monday after an increase in shelling and sniping.

The increased shelling and sniping followed a successful offensive last week by Syrian and right-wing forces against Palestinian guerrillas and the leftist allies in the mountains east of Beirut.

The closing of the museum crossing point has impeded the tangled round of negotiations going on between the many factions involved in the 17-month-old civil war, in which Kholi often acts as a go-between.

With the military situation dramatically altered by Syria's drive in the mountains, tentative contacts had resumed between Syria and the Palestinian commandos and between the Palestinians and President Sarkis.

The Druze community, an important ally of the leftists and the Palestinians, sent representatives to meet fellow Druze believers in Syria and made a joint appeal to the Syrian government over alleged atrocities in Druze villages captured by the mainly Christian rightist forces last week.

Meanwhile, France has in effect rejected a desperate appeal from Egypt and Lebanon's leftist leader Kamal Jumblat to intervene in the Lebanese civil war and to pressure Syria into halting its military campaign.

Robin Wood In Recital

Pianist Robin Wood will appear Friday at 8 p.m. at Craigdarroch Castle in a recital program which will be repeated on CBC Radio.

He has chosen Sonata in D Major Op. 12 by Clementi, the Schumann C Major Fantasy, four Chopin Mazurkas and the Samuel Barber Sonata Op. 26 which he performed in the Trio Victoria concert two weeks ago.

Wood leads a totally immersed musical life as principal of the Conservatory of Music here, teacher of master classes, adjudicator, examiner, touring artist and CBC recitalist.

Politics Mar IMF Talks

MANILA (UPI) — Pakistan and Nepal today demanded Taiwan's ouster from a meeting of the world's financial leaders and Arab delegates snubbed Israel, overshadowing the developing world's appeal for more aid.

Finance Ministers Ranamohammad Hanif Khan of Pakistan and Bhekh Thapa of Nepal, in separate speeches, demanded the expulsion of Taiwan from the joint annual meeting of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund and the seating of the Peoples' Republic of China.

Khas said the bank and the IMF should follow the United Nations' example of ousting Taiwan and seating China.

M. N. Huda, governor of the Bank of Bangladesh, also called for the inclusion of China "in these August institutions" but did not mention Taiwan.

The Arab delegates quietly left the conference hall in small groups just before a speech by Bank of Israel governor Moshe Sanbar and returned after he had finished. Among them were two Syrian co-chairmen of the conference.

As the parley entered its third day, more developing nations joined a growing number demanding greater assistance from western industrial nations.

Representatives from Costa Rica, Paraguay, Singapore and Jamaica, in addition to Nepal and Pakistan, spoke on behalf of the less advanced countries, who are deeply in debt to western banks.

Bernal Jimenes, president of the Costa Rican Central Bank and the spokesman for Latin America, said his region's annual deficits had tripled from 1973, just before the quadrupling of oil prices and the Arab oil embargo.

Stuffing Makes Turkey Extra Special

By MARY MOORE

I had a beautiful 12-pound turkey to stuff and was determined it was going to be different and extra good.

ROAST STUFFED TURKEY

Stuffing:

¼ c. margarine (or butter or chicken fat)
½ to 1 tsp. summer savory
¼ tsp. curry powder (do not omit
¾ c. Spanish or green onions, chopped
½ c. green pepper, chopped
2 tbsp. fresh or dry parsley seeds (OR ½ c. chopped parsley)
1 tsp. salt
8 c. cubed 100 per cent whole wheat bread (not packed)

In an outsized frying pan or large pot melt margarine or butter or chicken fat and add the summer savory, curry powder, onion, green pepper, parsley seed (or parsley) and stir over medium heat until all vegetables are soaked with the fat. Add the salt and cubed whole wheat bread and mix and stir gently until it is well blended. Remove from heat and let it cool while you wash and DRY the turkey. (If it is frozen it will take two days to thaw in the refrigerator.)

Put neck and gizzards and heart on to cook in 3 cups water and simmer 3 hours, covered. Add liver 5 minutes before cooking time is up. Fill cavity and neck opening with stuffing. Bring neck skin flap over neck stuffing and fasten with one long or two short skewers. Close large cavity by using three or four 5" skewers. With two long lengths of strong string tie legs and wings tightly to body.

With your fingers spread soft butter all over exposed top surfaces. Place on trivet in large roasting pan and roast uncovered for 4 hours at 325 deg. Fahr. This timing is perfect.

To make GIBLET GRAVY lift neck and giblets from broth and chop. Remove turkey to preheated platter and keep warm. Add pan juices to giblet broth. Mix 1-3 cup flour and 1 teaspoon salt with ½ cup cold water with wire whip until smooth and stir into gravy until thick. Add chopped giblets and reheat, stirring. Our crowd raved over the stuffing.

The Right Way to Treat a Bird

No matter how experienced you are in preparing and serving turkey, still there may be several questions on your mind! Here's what you need to know about thawing, roasting and stuffing to serve turkey on the safe side.

No matter how experienced you are in preparing and serving turkey, still there may be several questions on your mind! Here's what you need to know about thawing, roasting and stuffing to serve turkey on the safe side.

Thaw the bird in its original wrapper either in cold water, allowing about one hour per pound or in the refrigerator, allowing five hours per pound. These methods keep the outer meat and skin cold while the interior is still thawing. It's very important to refrigerate or cook turkey as soon as it has been thawed. Never leave it sitting at room temperature.

Also in the interests of safety, don't stuff turkey until just before the bird is to go in the oven. It may be very convenient to be able to pull a ready-stuffed turkey from the refrigerator or freezer and pop it in the oven, but it's also an excellent way to give spoilage organisms a chance to grow in the cavity.

Roasting turkey can also be tricky. For best results, place the turkey with the breast up on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Brush with butter or oil and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover loosely with aluminum foil shiny side down, tucking the edges under at the ends but leaving them open at the sides. Roast at 325 degrees F' using the following timetable as a guide for cooking times. Near the end of the roasting time, remove the foil to finish browning the turkey and baste with the drippings. Allow the turkey to stand about twenty minutes after removing from the oven.

TURKEY ROASTING TIME-TABLE
325 Degree F' Oven

Eviscerated Weight (pounds)	Roasting Time (hours)
8	3¾ to 4½
12	4¾ to 5½
16	5¼ to 6
20	5¾ to 6½
24	6¼ to 7

Begin testing for doneness when the turkey has been in the oven the shorter time within the range. Press the thick muscle of the drumstick, protecting your fingers with a cloth or paper towel; if it feels soft, the turkey is done. Another indication of doneness is when the leg moves readily when you lift or twist it. If using a meat thermometer, roast stuffed turkey to 165 Degree F in the centre of the stuffing and unstuffed turkey to 185 Degree F in the thigh.

Within two hours after the meal is served, remove the stuffing and separate large slices of meat from scaps. Refrigerate or freeze stuffing and meat immediately. If refrigerated, stuffing should be used in 2 to 3 days or if frozen, within two months. Leftover meat will keep 3 to 4 days in the refrigerator and one to three months in the freezer, one month if frozen in pieces or slices and three months if covered with broth, sauce or gravy.

BRILLIANT BROCCOLI

Take home a good-looking head of broccoli from your market this week and treat yourself to some good fall eating. Because broccoli is a member of the cabbage family, it makes particularly good eating right now!

Pick a head that's free from wilted leaves, with tender, firm stalks and compact bud clusters of dark purplish or sage green, depending on the variety.s Buy about two pounds for 6 servings, refrigerate in a perforated plastic bag and use within three days. Wash well under running water. Trim coarse leaves and woody stems, cut lengthwise in serving-size pieces and make 2 or 3 cuts part way up thick stalks.

The most usual method of cooking broccoli is to boil it. Place serving-size pieces upright, or on slices of stalks, in a saucepan in one inch of boiling water. Sprinkle with salt, cover and return to boil. Reduce heat and boil gently until stalk is just tender, 8 to 10 minutes for early varieties and 10 to 15 minutes for others.

Dress it up with any cheese sauce, or serve "Broccoli Souffle."

BROCCOLI SOUFFLE
3 tablespoons butter, melted
¼ cup flour
¼ teaspoon white pepper
1 cup milk
½ cup grated white cheddar cheese
1 cup chopped cooked broccoli
1 cup chopped cookd ham
4 beaten egg yolks
4 egg whites

Blend butter, flour and pepper. Gradually add milk. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add cheese and stir until melted. Combine broccoli, ham and egg yolk. Add sauce to broccoli mixture and combine. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold broccoli mixture into egg whites. Turn into ungreased souffle or baking dish. Bake at 325 deg. F. until knife inserted in centre comes out clean, (55 to 60 minutes). Serve immediately. 6 servings.

It's a Simple Life . . . But Includes Good Meals

hilda beastall

Local homemakers have been busy dealing with the enormous increases in food prices. Some of us have found ways to keep the total monthly food bill at a reasonable level, and have discovered at the same time that less quantities of what we call "better" food are more satisfying than the kinds we discarded because of their high price.

In fact, snacks between meals are now rare because the lower priced foods making up the meals are providing the energy and endurance needed in busy days of activity.

One of the busiest homemakers must be Wendy Bender, the local Sooke writer, weaver, vegetable gardener, printing press operator, and food store proprietor. Because of her belief in and enthusiasm for the new cost-cutting life set up by her own household, Wendy has just written a new book and together with her husband printed it on their own press. This delightful book is now in local bookstores, priced at $4.

This is a sequel to her first book Earth Market, published and printed by the Benders in 1975.

The new book is titled Earth Market Cook Book — Recipes for a Simple Life, but it is much more than a book of recipes. A few lively pages are devoted to the story of establishing a home by the Strait of Juan de Fuca after years of big city living remote from the real life of woods and storms and down-to-earth cooking.

The Benders learned how to use saw and axe to build shelters for goats and chickens, and what is more to the point, they learned how to pick up live chickens and to handle the milking of goats. These we can see, soon became pets as well as producers.

Vegetable growing was studied and practised, until year round quantities and variety was achieved. Grinding of whole wheat was learned and is described in detail in the book.

With vegetables all year round, and produce from hens and goats on a pretty steady basis, the recipes are a pleasure to read. Many remind me of ones I have offered in this column during the last seven years which proves that when homemakers determine to eat well on less money they get down to basics, use their heads, and come up with remarkably similar ways to accomplish their aims.

From a few lively words we get the feeling of sufficiency and independence which was won by gradually replacing high priced processed foods with basic ingredients put together at home with nutrition values as a priority.

To make this change in food habits is "a matter of making decisions, and sticking to them," and the book sets forth as the author intends "some approaches toward eating which include high protein, delicious food, which will give you energy, good appetite, and, one hopes, a zest for life."

Not forgotten is attractive appearance as an aid to appetite and enjoyment, and stressed also is what the author calls "style." This comes down to an attractively set table among other things.

Included in the new book are recipes for using soybeans, millet, brown rice, lentils and just beans. The vegetables, which we can all grow locally on allotment plot or in home garden, are dealt with separately. Each has several suggestions to spur the imagination, and some are specific in quantities, other ingredients, and in cooking times.

Raw fresh vegetables are in a chapter on salads. This includes one of my favorites, Kale Salad, and one from fresh picked or pulled vegetables on a winter's day. Some native (what most people call weeds) plants are included in recipes.

One recipe I must quote, for it simplifies the delicious but intricate and time consuming making of Cabbage Rolls that most of us find so irresistable if someone else makes them for us.

Wendy Bender's version of Cabbage Rolls she calls simply Stuffed Cabbage.

Here it is: Parboil whole cabbage leaves. Cool. Lay them out and fill with cooked (brown) rice, grated cheese, chopped parsley and sunflower seeds mixed together.

Stuff into small packages. Fry in butter for about 15 minutes. End of quotation.

That tricky little bit about stuffing "into small packages" is the trick to master. I have used white cotton to wrap around the cabbage leaves to hold in place; toothpicks would no doubt do. Both should be removed carefully, before serving especially to youngsters.

Here are Fried Jerusalem Artichokes: Wash and slice tubers. Spread on flat glass bake dish. Cover with one-third cup of oil. Bake for 35 minutes at 350 deg. (177 degs. C.) They will not be crisp like potatoes done the same way, but good. In fact delicious.

Hearty breakfasts have a chapter to themselves,and we find them loaded with all kinds of good things from crunch-type homemade cereals, oatmeal deluxe, muffins, pancakes, scones, "loaded" scrambled eggs, to the Bender's "super drink."

Entertainisg is not forgotten. And Wendy shows how to make elegant dishes of Lasagne with a super elegant salad; and Beans and Rice "dressed for a party, as it were."

And if you want to go crazy over wholewheat bread, read and use the recipe in the Earth Market Cook Book for Wendy's own regular loaf. It is no "mere carbohydrate filler" but "the core of a meal, privading great nourishment and great delight."

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR GROWERS: Recently we prepared a special Vegetarian Chili on TV. The response from the viewers requesting the recipe was so great, we are sharing it with you. We grew our own tomatoes, peppers, zucchini, onions and herbs, so we've named this Grow Your Own Chili.

GROW YOUR OWN CHILI

1 lb. red beans, kidney or pinto, soaked overnight. (Throw away old water, add enough fresh water to cover beans, and then some.) Fresh grown herbs (chives, thyme, rosemary, parsley).

2 large onions, (all vegetables chopped)
3 medium zucchini
1 lb. broccoli
6 medium tomatoes (parboil, then skin. Add whole.)
1 green chili pepper
2 bell peppers
1 can tomato sauce (largest size)
12 mdium mushrooms, sliced

Cook all ingredients uncovered over a low flame for three to four hours. The longer the chili cooks, the better it is. Stir frequently, season with chili powder and cayenne pepper to taste. Use a little garlic powder or grate two cloves of fresh garlic into the chili while cooking. Add freshly grown herbs at this time. Use low to medium flame.

This recipe serves quite a few, so you might want to cut it in half. It keeps in the refrigerator up to four days and can be served in many ways. Top with grated cheese (I use sharp cheddar) and sour cream. You can add any vegetables to this chili. Try floating avocados on chili when served. It's delicious on brown rice, stuffed in pita bread or over eggs for breakfast, lunch or dinner.

Add a sprig of parsley on the side (home grown, of course). Serve with hot tortillas and butter (warm in 400 deg. oven for 12 minutes, spread with butter). Serve ice cold apples for dessert.

What Is Breakfast of Champions?

eating right

Now that Tommy's up at five a.m. three mornings a week for hockey practise, and Jeff is late every day after school playing basketball, you're probably more concerned that usual about their health and well-being.

Then there's Mandie studying gymnastics, and your preseason skiing exercises. Are you eating the right foods to give your body the energy to perform well? And what about "quick energy" foods and vitamin E supplements?

Basically, an athlete's nutritional needs are not that different from those of someone of the same age and sex who is not athletic. An athlete needs more calories to provide the extra energy expended in almost any sport, and he needs more water to compensate for the water his body loses when he sweats.

He needs to eat plenty of fruits and vegetables to build up his supply of the minerals that can be lost in perspiration. And, if he's training strenuously, he may take salt tablets or, better yet, drink bouillon, consomme or beef or chicken broth to cunteract any excessive loss of sodium. (The broth or consomme provides him with fluid as well as salt, and in a more palatable and balanced form.)

Should you begin to participate regularly in a sport, or become more than usually physically active, you should take a serious look at your diet. Make sure you're getting enough calories and plenty of water.

The kind of food you eat is very important. Your body takes the food energy you consume and transforms it into body energy. It stores the energy as glycogen in your liver and muscle, and as glucose in your blood. The process takes about 2 to 4 hours.

If you're concerned about being at your strongest nd most energetic for playing hockey or basketall or whatever, you should eat a nutritious, balanced meal about four hours before you intend to play. (The meal should consist of milk; meat, fish or eggs; a green or yellow vegetable; another vegetable or a fruit; and a serving of bread, cereal or potato.) But make sure you allow your body those four hours or so to make from the food you're eating, the energy you need to play well.

A chocolate bar gulped down just before the game is not going to help you. "Quick energy" foods, like honey, glucose tablets and candy bars, just don't work. People may tell you that they'll give your body a sudden burst of energy. That's not true. Your body doesn't work that quickly — on any food. And besides, if you're eating properly, your body already has all the energy it needs to play basketball, skate or swim. Things like chocolate bars won't give you more energy: just more calories.

Then there are the claims that vitamin E will improve your athletic ability. The fact is that practise will do more for you than any pill. But if you are considering taking vitamin E, you should know a few things about it.

Your body needs about 10 milligrams of vitamin E every day: that really isn't very much. As your body can store the vitamin efficiently for long periods of time, a sufficient reserve of vitamin E means you can go for weeks without having to consume any more. An ounce of wheat germ on your cereal, or eating whole wheat bread and cereal regularly, along with oil dressings on your salads will provide you with all the vitamin E you need.

If you're still worried and want to take a supplement, take only 10 milligrams a day. More than that will not supercharge your body, or improve the way you play basketball.

If you really want to be at your best throughout a sports season, you have to eat properly, and give your body the nutrition it needs to create the energy necessary to participate in sports. One good meal a day won't do it. All your meals and snacks have to be nutritious.

If you find that large meal before a game irritates you or causes you any discomfort, try cutting down on fatty foods. Some professional athletes are habitually bothered by stomach cramps or nausea after eating. To avoid the cramps but still get the food energy they need to give their best physical performance, they often drink a mixture of 1½ cups of skim milk, ¼ cup skim milk powder, ¼ cup water, 2 Tbsp. of sugar and ½ tsp. of vanilla. This liquid formula contains about 250 calories takes only two hours to digest and is very easy on the stomach.

There's no magic pill, or special food that will make you become a better athelete. The best thing you can do for yourself and your body, is eat right get regular amounts of sleep and practise all you can.

your health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

About once a month I get a spasm of the throat and my air passage becomes completely closed. I cannot catch my breath. It is a very frightening experience. I almost become unconscious. My doctor says that nothing can be done about it but that it is not dangerous and that I will not choke to death. Any comments? — Mrs. V.B.D.

Dear Mrs. D.:

I know how terrifying the feeling is because it has happened to me on two occasions in my life.

When one is eating or chewing or drinking and talking at the same times, some food or liquid may drop down onto the vocal cords and cause a severe spasm. This is nature's mechanism to stop food going down into the lungs rather than into the esophagus and stomach.

I have found a simple method that works for me and for some of my patients who complain of the frightening sensations you describe. In the absence of any disease, and I gather there is none in your case, may I suggest that you try the following.

When a spasm occurs, try to breath in and out through your mouth or nose for a moment or two without swallowing anything. Even swallowing saliva will start the spasm all over again. Many people who watch you during these spasms will try to induce you to swallow liquid. This will make you more uncomfortable by starting the spasm again.

Try it. It is simple safe and it works.

We've heard all kinds of reports about how bad smoking is but we've heard nothing about the hazards of chewing tobacco and sniffing snuff. Can these be harmful too? — Mrs. C.B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

The tobacco that is chewed does not enter the lungs and consequently does not affect as directly the bronchial tubes and the lungs as does the smoking of tobacco. Yet the tars, the nicotine, and the other toxins are absorbed into the blood stream in those who chew tobacco.

Similarly, those who sniff snuff (tobacco) are absorbing a great deal of the tars and nicotine through the mucous membrane lining of the nose.

Survey Shows Pork's a Good Buy Now

Canadian Press

Pork prices dipped by as much as 10 per cent in September in several cities surveyed by The Canadian Press and experts predict prices will continue to drop as long as meat packers and retailers buy pork in the United States.

Dayre Peer, manager of the Ontario Pork Producers Marketing Board, said in an interview that with pork production up in the U.S. by 22 per cent "it amounts to twice the total Canadian production and that is the reason for the price decline."

Sugar continued to drop in price or remained stable in all 12 cities surveyed for the monthly food basket. However, these declines were offset by coffee prices which are expected to increase by as much as 40 cents a pound in the next two weeks.

Increases in coffee prices are the result of poor crops in Brazil, political strife in Angola, floods in Colombia and earthquakes in Guatemala.

Prices are not surveyed in Victoria, but are considered to be as high or higher than Vancouver's. The Vancouver survey showed:

Sugar dropped 38 cents to 95 cents, chicken six cents to 89 cents, eggs two cents to 66 cents, apples six cents to 39 cents. Coffee was up 41 cents to $2.39, tomatoes 20 cents to 69 cents, wieners 26 cents to $1.05, codfish 10 cents to $1.39, milk one cent to 66 cents, butter two cents to $1.21. Cost of the basket was $18.95 for 16 items compared with the total of $15.23 for 15 items the previous month. One year ago it was $16.05 for 13 items.

Chili: Con Tiny

A tasty but simple dish for readers with limited cooking time and knowledge is that great Mexican dish, CHILI CON CARNE.

Chili con carne means chili with meat, but since I add beans, what I'm going to present here has the proud name of chili con carne con frijoles.

I must confess that my recipe is more Canadian than Mexican, since I have not striven for authenticity, but have aimed at speed and fine flavor, with a big nod to cutting costs.

Traditional Mexican chili con carne is wonderfully distinctive because it uses pork and beef lovingly hunked, fresh green chilis and works up dried red or pink beans from scratch.

Here I have made substitutions; using ground beef only, the easily obtained chili powder and canned kidney beans.

TINY'S CANADIAN CHILI

Put out; one large onion, thinly sliced; two chopped cloves of garlic (optional); one tablespoon shortening or lard; one pound ground beef; two chopped tomatoes — or one tablespoon canned tomato paste; one teaspoon salt; two teaspoons dried oregano; one teaspoon cummin seeds (optional); one small can kidney beans; one tablespoon paprika and powdered chili to taste — I'll get to the amount later.

The best pot for the entire dish is a big heavy, deep skillet but any heavy pot will do at a pinch.

Melt the shortening in the pot, add garlic and onions and cook on fairly high heat until the onion is wilted, add the ground beef and brown, stirring constantly.

Now to reduce the fatty content, tilt the pot and scrape the contents up the slope so that surplus fat gathers at the bottom then scoop it out with a heavy spoon. If you make little channels between the meat-onion contents you will release most of the fat for scooping away.

Add the tomatoes, the drained beans, salt, oregano, paprika and cummin seeds and stir in gently until well mixed. When the child begins to bubble, lower the heat and partially cover.

Now comes the tough task, adding exactly the amount of chili powder to bring out the flavor . . . without putting in so much that the dish becomes scorching hot . . . AND this depends upon the diner's taste habits.

For a mild chili, add two teaspoons of chili powder and stir in and taste. Remember that whes the chili powder blands into the meat, beans and onions with the cooking, it appears to get hotter, so use a light hand when you add more.

A sensible alternative is to stick with two teaspoons and if it is not hot enough for some, hand them a pot of dried chopped hot-red peppers at the table and let them bring it up to their preferred level.

With the chili powder stirred in, scatter one tablespoon of flour on top, mix well and adjust the heat to allow the food to gently bubble partially covered. It may need a dribble of hot water if it gets too thick but be sparing since a dish of chili should be good and thick.

Green salads go beautifully with this and I make up a bowl of thinly sliced tomatoes and very mild onions, dash on a little vinegar and soya sauce, salt, pepper and a sprinkle of chives or parsley and mix and marinate in the fridge.

Pass around plain crackers, buttered slices of hot toast, Melba toast or Ryevita.

To my taste, chili con carne is too spicy for most wines but a young and rather rough red Chianti can be a perfect match. Ale and water naturally are excellent and I choose the ale if I can't get hold of the right wine.

This very basic dish allows for all kinds of variations as long as they don't get too far away from the basis of ground or chopped meat, onions, tomato and beans, with of course the herbs and chili powder.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: May I put in my two cents about married men taking their secretaries out for lunch and cocktails?

When Jack (not his real name) first met me, I was the new girl in the office, and Jack was a salesman. My two bosses (both married) kept inviting me to lunch and cocktails to "unwind" after work, but I was going with Jack, and he used to say that girls who accept such invitations were tramps.

What's your thinking on this, Abby?—STRAIGHT ARROW

DEAR STRAIGHT: As I've said, it all depends on where they lunch, the frequency of the lunches and who's feeding whom what.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote asking how to introduce a person with whom one has an intimate relationship without marriage, and you said, "Call him-her a 'friend.'"

I am appalled that you would give a sexual connotation to the word "friend."

I have been going with a very fine gentleman for two years whom I've been introducing as my friend. Now I'm wondering if everyone thinks we are bed partners.

I refuse to call a paunchy, 60-year-old man my "boyfriend," but what do I call him?

Abby, please find another word to describe a live-in pal —FRIENDLESS.

DEAR FRIENDLESS: Why must one be labelled according to whether or not the relationship includes sexual intimacy? (It's nobody's business.) Friendship is a large umbrella that covers platonic relationships as well as roommates. Not every friend is necessarily a lover, but I would hope that every lover is a friend.

DEAR ABBY: I have a comment or two to make about the letter from PASTOR STEVENSON. It was written in response to a prior letter from a young girl whose father had sexually abused her. PASTOR STEVENSON suggested that the girl had "tempted" her father by wearing "tight-fitting, revealing clothes."

This attitude is another variation on the theme that any woman who is raped must have been asking for it. It places the burden of guilt on the victim rather than on the attacker—where it belongs!?

The pastor seemed quite sympathetic to the tempted father, but had not a single word of sympathy for the abused daughter.

The pastor just assumes that the girl dressed provocatively: One is innocent until proven guilty, pastor!

No man can be forced into committing rape. He does it by choice, and the responsibility for the act belongs to the man, the perpetrator—not to the woman, his victim.—C.J.S.

DEAR ABBY: You are entirely too soft when it comes to disciplining children. I may be old-fashioned, but I raised three well-behaved children by using the 3B system—Bust their Butts with a Board.—3B BELIEVER

Loaves With a Difference

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press

Italian-American cooks sometimes add chunks of ham to their plain bread dough. We presume this is what inspired another cook, with a different culinary heritage, to dream up raisin bread loaves that include ham and cheese. When we tried her recipe and offered the bread, fresh from the oven, to our teen-age nephew and a husky friend of his they gobbled up almost a whole loaf!

RAISIN SANDWICH BREAD

- 1 envelope active dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1½ tablespoons sugar
- 3 cups (about) flour
- 1 cup finely diced cooked ham
- 1 cup finely diced extra-sharp cheddar cheese
- ½ cup seedless raisins

In a large bowl dissolve the yeast in the water. Stir in the salt and sugar. Gradually work in enough flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto a lightly floured smooth surface and knead until smooth and elastic — about 10 minutes. Cover with plastic wrap and let rise in a draft-free, warm 80 to 85 degrees place until doubled — about 1 hour.

Punch down dough. Turn out onto lightly floured surface and knead in the ham, cheese and raisins. Divide in half. Shape into 2 loaves, keeping the raisins from studding the tops so the fruit won't dry during the baking. Place in 2 buttered loaf pans, each 8½ by 4½ by 2⅝ inches. Cover and let rise as previously until doubled — 45 to 60 minutes. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, on a rack below the centre, until golden and loaves sound hollow when tapped — about 45 minutes.

Loosen edges and turn out on wire racks; turn right side up; cool. Delicious sliced and slathered with butter; or made into sandwiches with lettuce and mayonnaise with or without sliced chicken or turkey. Makes 2 loaves; do not expect them to rise high above the pans or the crust to be dark brown.

Blintzes

From Jewish cuisine.

- 1 large egg
- 12 ounces — 1½ cups dry cottage cheese
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
- 14 thin pancakes — crepes, each 8 inches in diameter.

Beat egg until thickened and lemon color; add remaining ingredients except pancakes and beat just to blend. Put a spoonful of the cheese mixture in the centre of each pancake; fold in sides; roll. Fry, turning once, in a generous amount of butter in a large skillet until lightly browned. Serve with sour

Stay Hungry More Than Just a Parody

A Movie Review
By Nora Hutchison

Getting a fix on Bob Rafelson's new picture, Stay Hungry, is more than tough, because at times everything seems to work beautifully and at other times it all fails miserably. Still, you can't just ignore this director's work. The screenplay, by Rafelson and Charles Gaines, lacks a sense of direction and wholeness. The film appears to both expand on Rafelson's earlier themes of the importance of family, of roots put down and then torn away, of inconclusive search for truth, and to parody them. But to shelve the movie as just game-playing is foolish in light of the weight of his other work — Five Easy Pieces and The King of Marvin Gardens — so the problem is to sort out whether or not the movie works, and to what degree.

Stay Hungry is about Craig Blake, a pleasant, easy-going southern boy who lives alone in his deceased parent's mansion up on a hill outside Birmingham, Ala. Though he's been raised to "quality" living, and his sole servant, an old black man (Scatman Crothers), keeps him from dismissing tradition entirely, Craig (Jeff Bridges) is mainly interesteed in the town's oddballs and crazies. Craig's slumming cause his relatives no end of concern and draws this advice: "It's time," his Uncle Albert writes, "to seek the comforts of your traditions." But tradition, Craig reckons, has little place in his world.

Craig and a pal from his country club are mixed up in a shifty real estate deal with several southern-fried "good ole-boys" who want to build Birmingham's tallest highrise on a city block which they almost own. It's Craig's job to secure the last building, a battered gymnasium called the Olympic Spa.

Craig walks in ready to negotiate a deal, and walks out a member, with a complete plan of action for a body-building campaign. What he's really turned on to, though, is the mystique of the place — the rituals of exercise, of competition and of "pumping iron." He makes friends with Joe Santo (Arnold Schwarzenegger, a former Mr. World, and Mr. Universe) who trains for competition in a Bat Man mask, and takes up socially with Mary Taté, Farnsworth (Sally Field), a sprightly young employee of the Spa. It occurs to Craig that the world of bar bells may be no less real than that of real estate wheeling and dealing.

Like Bobby Dupea in Five Easy Pieces, Craig sees rebellion against his class as a necessary step in his search for himself. The Spa may be an unusual place to look for it, but no less valid than a Texas oil field or an island off the west coast of British Columbia. Craig appreciates the goals of the Spa's world and its simple, clearly defined rules. Rafelson makes us care for it, too. Our affection for his movies stems in part from his unobtrusive, quiet use of the camera, his off-beat sense of humor and his eye for visual surprise. Rafelson is a good story-teller — delighting in unexpected twists of narrative and shifts in awareness of point of view, and wise in his treatment of quirky personalities.

Stay Hungry is fun — enterprising, vigorous, inventive, full of bounce, but it also makes awkward compromises. The trouble lies mainly with the characters. Craig is a genuine curiosity but his country club-real estate friends come on like dissipated goons and his relatives are intolerable snobs. In contrast, his pals at the Spa behave like the dumb-bells you love to hug, and Joe Santo turns out to be an accomplished fiddleplayer, a connoisseur of glassware and a hip-pocket philosopher. "I don't believe in getting too comfortable," he says to Craig. "Stay hungry."

The sides are just not evenly matched, the characters are too easily perceived and their problems too easily straightened out. The ultimate falsity is the movie's ending, a conventionally happy one of boy-gets-girl, for at least a couple of months. Happy endings are not Rafelson's usual style and this one feels forced. Perhaps Rafelson, too, should take a cue from Uncle Albert's advice.

RUPERT FORGOTTEN?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government grain elevator in Prince Rupert is virtually ignored by the Canadian Wheat Board and the grain-handling industry and citizens of the north coast port fear the elevator might be closed for good, a federal royal commission was told Tuesday.

Prince Rupert Mayor Dr. William Hick told the Emmett Hall Commission on grain handling and transportation that the 2.25-million-bushel elevator is controlled by the Canadian Grain Commission which has called for proposals from parties wishing to lease the facility.

Dr. Hick said big grain co-operatives have concentrated on exporting through their own terminal facilities here, treating Prince Rupert as an overflow port.

Pot Confusion Reigns

Washington Post

BOGOTA — Marijuana is not legal in Colombia. Almost everyone thought it was going to be for a while, and then when it wasn't legalized, even more people thought it had been.

The confusion, spread worldwide in news agency and magazine articles, has been a headache for drug law enforcement officials here. Top quality Colombian "red" marijuana is the centre of a tightly organized clandestine export industry linking isolated mountain valleys with the North American market in countless small planes and between the false hulls of an armada of small boats.

The trade is estimated at about 4,500 tons a year, or 10 times the amount confiscated by harassed agents of the F-2, the Colombian special drug unit. About 80 to 90 U.S. citizens, mostly young, are idling in Colombia jails awaiting trial on suspected drug offenses at any one time, more than in any other Latin American country except Mexico.

They are there because Colombian law for years made no distinction between marijuana and other drugs, providing two months to a year in jail for possession and three to 12 years for trafficking, without explaining the difference in the offenses. It was an attempt to change that law that caused all the confusion.

Minister of Justice Samuel Hoyos Arango became concerned last year about the growing trend toward marijuana decriminalization in the United States, according to sources who know his thinking.

"Why should a Colombian narcotics agent risk his life here to stop marijuana going out when smoking it only means someone will be fined $10 in the United States?" he is said to have asked.

In early March, he announced that possession of up to one ounce of marijuana would soon be punished only by a fine and a trip to a rehabilitation centre. He added that he was considering legalizing exporting the weed to countries where its consumption was legal.

The domestic reaction was thunderously negative. Most Colombians immediately assumed that decriminalization meant legalization.

Hoyos backed down. The decree signed April 12 changed nothing in the old law about penalties. It merely defined users for the first time as those who had one ounce (28 grams) of marijuana or 10 grams of hashish on them when arrested. They would still be subject to up to one year in jail plus a fine of $30. Other drugs and larger quantities still mean three to 12 years.

Dumping Tax On Awnings

OTTAWA (FP) — The Anti-Dumping Tribunal has decided to launch an inquiry into the impact of dumping into Canada of painted aluminum rollformed sheets and related parts that are used for the manufacture of stepdown awnings that originate in the United States.

The inquiry follows a formal complaint to the government by Fashion Grilles Division of Ram Partitions Ltd. of Downsview and a preliminary determination by the federal revenue department last month that there is dumping.

Europe's First Man Million Years Old?

ATHENS (AP) — Recent discoveries show that Europe's earliest man lived about one million years ago in the region of Macedonia and used fire, says a prominent Greek anthropologist.

Aristotle Poulianos, giving what he said was a foretaste of revelations to be made in a few months at an international conference, said the proof was provided by the recently discovered remains of a 700,000-year-old elephant and stone weapons in the sandhill plains of Kozani-Ptolemaida, in northern Greece.

Poulianos said this newly-discovered period should be named the prepaleolithic age.

"This period is the centre of Europe's prehistory," Poulianos said. "Though primitive, its contribution is as significant as the Golden Age of Greece (3,000 years ago) or the Minoan civilization (third millenium B.C.). Man made use of fire for the first time in Macedonia and spread to what today is East and Western Europe."

"In addition to various primitive stone implements, two stone weapons were also found in the region, looking like something between a sledge-hammer and a human fist. Poulianos said that there were clear signs of deliberately made hand-grips on them, and that the weapons obviously had been made to kill animals.

Court Test For Labels

OTTAWA (CP) — A Quebec law requiring bilingual labels on food packages and cans sold in provincial stores is to be reviewed by the Supreme Court of Canada, the court said Tuesday.

Dominion Stores was found guilty of several counts of disobeying the law at its Chicoutimi store in 1971.

The company argued that the Quebec law infringes on the federal authority to regulate trade and commerce.

The appeal probably will not be heard until early next year.

Miss Worth Was Psychiatrist's Second Jumper from EMI

Theresa Anne Worth was the second patient of psychiatrist Dr. Alexander Stewart to jump from the second floor roof garden of Eric Martin Institute in 1973, B.C. Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

The disclosure came in day-long cross-examination of Stewart by Cecil Branson, counsel for Miss Worth, who is suing Stewart, Dr. Diane Grant, nurse Peggy Gallimore and Royal Jubilee Hospital for damages, alleging negligence.

Miss Worth was paralysed in both legs after jumping from the second floor roof garden of EMI Nov. 2, 1973, where she was a patient of Stewart's. She was 23 at the time.

Court was told earlier that a man scaled the wall and fled about six months before the incident involving Miss Worth.

Stewart said the man was also a patient of his. He was acutely psychotic and ran away from a special nurse.

"If somebody is intent on running away you can lock them up and throw away the key but they can still commit suicide," he said. "EMI is an open psychiatric hospital, not a prison."

He agreed the man, whom he described as athletic, used 2-by-4 metal projections from the roof garden wall as a ladder to get over the top.

The man was "acutely psychotic and bent on escape" and "vaulted" the wall.

Questioned on vaulting a 10-foot, four-inch wall, Stewart said he meant the man "climbed it very quickly."

Stewart said he cannot recall being involved in any discussions after this episode about corrective measures.

He said he did write a memo to a Dr. Kenning after the Worth incident and believed he got a reply. He said "As best I can recall" the reply reflected that adequate precautions must be taken as a result of the incidents.

Stewart added that the male patient, after jumping, left the hospital grounds and was brought back later with no serious injury.

He said Miss Worth's thinking processes were quite clear and not disrupted by any psychotic or insane illness.

He said she decided "on a sudden impulse to elope from the hospital" and this event was "entirely unforeseeable, in my opinion."

Much of the cross-examination was spent in referring back to answers given by Stewart at his examination for discovery, a pre-trial procedure in which one party to an action may be informed as to facts known by other parties.

On a number of occasions, he said the answers he gave at examination for discovery were true, but he wanted to amplify or qualify the answers.

Branson at one point referred to testimony Monday in which Stewart said a pass given to Miss Worth to leave EMI for part of a day came after she said she was "upset" at waiting to get involved in her program and sought a pass to get some clothes.

At the examination for discovery, he also said Miss Worth was frightened and apprehensive about the hospital, wanted to have time out of the hospital, and would go into therapy if she could have a pass. Stewart said then, he thought if he could demonstrate trust to her, she could have trust in him.

The pass was cancelled after the first day in what Drs. Grant and Stewart said was a mutual arrangement following concern which Stewart said Miss Worth's mother had expressed to Grant.)

Stewart reiterated that Miss Worth had inadvertently come to the door of an intensive feelings therapy session he was conducting for out-patients one day and that he had emphasized to her, because of her concern, that this progam was not for her.

He said the group was "colloquially called scream therapy" but he said he didn't call it that. He said he had never given "primal scream" therapy but referred such requests to a Vancouver colleague.

But you gave her Dr. Arthur Janov's book Primal Scream Therapy, said Branson.

"I said that in my discovery," replied Stewart.

Branson referred to some hospital records which said Miss Worth was upset at "Dr. Stewart's primal scream group."

Stewart replied that this "is the writing of a nurse who was not involved in my program" which was an intensive feelings program and not a primal scream program.

He said he never told Miss Worth she was a committed patient in EMI and "it never came up." He also said the later objection of Miss Worth's parents, that they signed the committal order without knowing what it meant, was the first time in seven years there had ever been a later objection.

Asked if it is good for a patient to learn from a nurse she was a committed patient, he replied "in a perfect world it is better for doctors to tell everything but that is impossible." He said that Miss Worth's parents knew she was committed.

And you still say that knowing what happened?

"Now that we all know, hindsight is better than foresight."

Asked if he would agree Miss Worth must have been "pretty desperate" to jump from the roof garden, Stewart said, "No, I don't agree. She had previously gambled with her life. I believe she again gambled with her life and as she said in her testimony, the maximum she would get would be a broken leg."

Stewart, asked if he had diagnosed her on the morning of the incident as "acutely suicidal," replied that he felt she had "suicidal tendencies" and had been placed on suicide precautions.

Forging Ahead Quietly

EDMONTON (CP) — R. Angus Alberta Ltd. goes quietly about its business—a 100-per-cent canadian-owned private company that deals in heavy equipment, tires, computer services and aviation.

R. Angus prefers to keep a low public profile, president J. A. (Sacha) Angus said in turning down a recent request for an interview.

The company was founded in 1919 in Victoria by Richard Angus and purchased following the Second World War by his five sons and three daughters.

Sacha Angus moved to Alberta in 1951 to guide the firm's eventual expansion to nine locations in Alberta and the Northwest Territories—Peace River, Grande Prairie, Fort McMurray, Inuvik, Hay River, Edmonton, Red Deer, Calgary and Lethbridge.

Sacha's brother, R. H., is chairman of the board of the family-owned company, while R. H.'s son Rick is vice-president of operations. Another son, Forry, is manager of the Calgary operation.

R. Angus started in Alberta as the dealer for Waukesha Motor Co., a manufacturer of diesel engines. It now employs 1,300 people, has an $18-million annual payroll, a $20-million investment in plant facilities and $40 million in inventory. It is one of the largest Caterpillar dealerships in the world.

R. Angus Tire Services Ltd. sells, repairs and retreads Michelin, Goodyear and Caterpillar tires. R. Angus Computer Services Ltd. provides a wide variety of computer services to Alberta companies.

most recent addition. It is an air charter company operating out of Edmonton with six aircraft licensed to fly anywhere in North America.

In a recent submission to the Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry, John E. Barry, the company's senior vice-president, said the R. Angus group of companies is involved in every major economic development in Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

Getting there hasn't always been easy.

In 1961, for example, R. Angus found the demand for heavy-duty mechanics had exceeded the supply. So, with the approval of the Alberta apprenticeship board, the company designed a heavy-duty mechanic course and started training its own apprentices. It now graduates 20 qualified mechanics a year—80 per cent of all the graduates from all sources in the province.

R. Angus also has a journeyman upgrading program, a service analyst school, a company service supervisory school and an instructors' school.

In 1974, facing a lack of qualified partsmen and inadequacies of programs available from government-sponsored institutions, the company designed a three-year partsman apprentice program to cover the heavy-duty equipment field.

It is the only company in Alberta that has been given approval by the apprentice and tradesman qualification branch to carry on full training programs on its own premises, for mechanics, partsmen and partswomen.

Although the Angus family itself prefers to avoid public exposure, company spokesmen have recently taken strong positions on a proposed natural-gas pipeline from Alaska and the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Barry, in effect, told the pipeline inquiry that the pipeline should be built despite objections of northern residents.

Pointing to the emerging energy shortage, he said:

"You cannot morally cause other human beings to suffer because you might be inconvenienced."

Mr. Barry said much of the concern of northern residents appears to centre on the problem of employment when a pipeline is constructed.

"While everyone is sitting around complaining about what might happen when a pipeline is built, northern residents are not being trained.

"Industry, in general, is ready to train but has not been asked or used because the government is allowing itself to be compromised.

"Native claims are native claims—not conditions for building a pipeline any more than they were conditions for building the Mackenzie Highway, the Inuvik airport, the Pine Point mine or a dock at Norman Wells. The native claims were in existence when every economic development took place in the Northwest Territories."

Mr. Barry said R. Angus believes that native land claims should be settled as quickly as feasible but "strongly objects to the delay of intelligent economic development for the benefit of Canada.

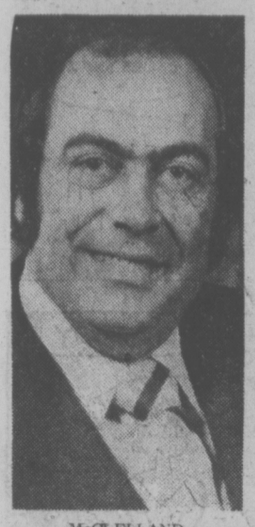
Compulsory Cure for Addicts?



McCLELLAND

Health Minister Bob McClelland finds it "incongruous" that compulsory treatment can be ordered for alcoholics but not for drug addicts.

Current legislation permitting voluntary treatment of addicts is insufficient for the protection of society, McClelland told a meeting of probation officers Tuesday.

He cited figures showing the rise in violent crime in the province and data showing that much of that crime was committed by addicts to support his claim.

But he said he did not want to anticipate recommendations being prepared by the B.C. Alcohol and Drug Commission.

"I am determined that any plan shall recognize that the protection of society be given equal consideration and as long as we offer the user the option of a variety of voluntary treatment approaches, direction into treatment is another approach I find acceptable."

Drug commission chairman Bert Hoskin said compulsory treatment of drug addicts in prisons is already on the federal law books, but the section has never been implemented.

Despite the hard work of professionals, Hoskin said, the voluntary approach reaches relatively few drug addicts.

"Therefore, we have got to have something else."

The commission's recommendations have yet to be formulated, Hoskin said, but if the government opts for compulsory treatment, some form of registration could easily be established.

He said an assessment would have to be made of individual drug users and treatment might be on a voluntary basis, a requirement of parole, or the user could be placed in a confined setting or prison with a six-month to a year review.

Hoskin said most agencies are too short-term to produce good results.

"This will be my plea to government — that whatever is done, it will have to be continued for a reasonable length of time."

He estimated any program would have to run at least two years without changes before a proper assessment could be made.

Police believe drug addicts were responsible for as much as 60 per cent of total crime McClelland said.

Since 1966 the drug underworld has been responsible for 52 deaths, 19 attempted murders and an unknown number of "hot cap" deaths and untraceable disappearances, he said.

It is illegal to possess or traffic in drugs such as heroin or cocaine, but not illegal to be a drug user.

Wage-Price Explosion Predicted

OTTAWA (CP) — The country could witness an explosive push for large price and wage increases after the federal government ends its anti-inflation program, a senior labor official suggested Tuesday.

Donald Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, said that the tense collective bargaining atmosphere in the U.S. which followed removal of controls in 1974 could be moderate compared with what will happen in Canada.

When wage and price controls in the U.S. ended, the number of strikes and lockouts soared, the report of the U.S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service showed.

U.S. controls ended in May, 1974, and a month later there were 230 work stoppages with 72,000 workers off the job.

ROCK BEATS VIKING

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking 2 pushed a rock on Mars, but the rock would not budge.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory were not sure why the robot spacecraft failed to move the rock, which is only about nine inches long.

The scientists don't want the rock. They want to get at the soil beneath it, figuring that it protected the dirt for millions of years from the withering blast of solar rays that penetrate the thin Martian atmosphere.

That may have preserved organic material, necessary for the developmnt of life, which the Viking landers have been unable to find elsewhere in the soil of Mars.

The robot laboratory's soil scoop gave the rock a futile shove Monday, although the scoop arm is strong enough to move 30 to 40 pounds on earth, and so should be capable of shoving about 100 pounds on Mars, where the gravity is only a third as strong.

Give your family our best.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is a great difference between the correct play and the winning play, although there are those pragmatists who believe that the winning play is always the correct play.

In today's deal we have an example of a defender who made the winning play. However, virtually every bridge player will agree that he did not make the correct play. The deal arose in a recent rubber-bridge game.

	NORTH ♠ 7 6 4 3 ♡ J 9 6 3 ◇ 7 5 ♣ 10 5 2
WEST ♠ Q J 8 ♡ 5 ◇ A 10 9 6 4 2 ♣ 7 6 4		EAST ♠ 10 9 5 ♡ A 10 8 7 4 2 ◇ K J ♣ 8 3
	SOUTH ♠ A K 2 ♡ K Q ◇ Q 8 3 ♣ A K Q J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	2 ◇	Pass	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

South's jump to three no-trump was a drastic overbid, especially when one considers the fact that he had already overbid when he opened with a game-forcing two-club bid on a hand containing five losing tricks.

The normal, correct defensive play at trick one would have been made by practically every East player in the world: on West's opening lead of a low diamond, East would have put up the king and returned the jack. South, knowing that West possessed the ace of diamonds, would have followed suit with a low diamond, hoping that East had no more diamonds (which figured to be, since West had made an overcall on a suit missing the king, queen and jack).

With the jack winning, East would then lead a spade to South's king. Needing two heart tricks, South would have to lead the heart king, hoping that East had the ace. Declarer would now have his contracted-for nine tricks: two spades, two hearts, and five clubs.

But East, on the opening diamond lead, did not put up the king. Instead, he made the "mistake" of playing the jack. South won with the queen. If he didn't, and West's diamond suit happened to be headed by the A-K, South would be en route to losing five or six diamond tricks.

When South eventually led his heart king to try to make his ninth trick, East took the ace of hearts and led back the king of diamonds. West overtook with his ace, and proceeded to cash five diamond tricks, to send declarer down to a two-trick defeat.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, October 7

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contracts, commitments, ability to succesfully conclude a deal without tripping over legal clauses — these are emphasized. Key is to accept necessary changes, to be analytical, to co-operate with one who is attractive, alert and has your best interests at heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home front can become a more harmonious place. Be kind, diplomatic, make wise concessions, remember gift for special occasion. Stick to basic points, routine — don't upset applecart with radical proposals. Utilize your natural sense of timing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What you thought was a necessity could be a triviality. Know it and respond accordingly. Member of opposite sex does play key role. See beyond the surface — avoid self-deception. Pisces, Virgo could figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stress organization, business, career, commitment to deadline, keeping promises, elevating standing in community. Accept added responsibility. In personal life, relationship intensifies. If you're playing games, get away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish rather than begin action, project. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Emphasis on what's ahead, philosophy, ability to perceive potential without distortion. Long-distance messages or instructions could be garbled.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money and love could, oddly enough, go together. Know it and don't create your own obstacles. Co-operate with partner, mate. You get to heart of matters. If single, you could fall madly in love. If married, you "rediscover" spouse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You gain if you permit one who cares . . . to teach you. Emphasis is on seeing "other side" of argument, proposition. Cancer, Aquarius individuals could be in picture. Rise above petty jealousies. Shake off tendency to be possessive. You don't 'own' any person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid direct confrontations. Take ring roads to destination. Be versatile — accept invitation to social affair. Leave details for another time. Gain overall view. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If one who has been "keeping your company" is unreasonable, make some adjustments. Live your life as joy, creatively and not in petty manner. If quarrels, accusations mar happiness — now you can do something about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What seems a dead end may actually represent a temporary detour. Know it and start utilizing alternatives. Gemini, Virgo individuals could figure prominently. Change, travel, variety could all be upcoming.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relatives call, visit, impose their opinions, ask, request, assert. Key is to be diplomatic without losing independence. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently. Hold off on trip — you don't have full story. Verify any reservations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money is to be considered, but romantic illusions, expectations cannot be ignored. Know it and respond accordingly. Another Pisces — and a Virgo — could be part of scenario. See as is, not through rose-colored glasses. Someone wants something for nothing. Refuse to be a target.

IF OCTOBER 7th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, artistic and phychic. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You make significant domestic change, adustment in November. You'll be happier in 1977 — more freedom, creativity. If single, marriage is on horizon. Married or single, prospects are exciting for travel and greater self-expression.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1446 for the game today. Two 4's, one 1, and one 6. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example, 41 — 6 4 is a solution for 39.

The limit without a break seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Amazing: Pampas-Grass Plumes

The silvery plumes of Pampas-grass appear almost magically at the end of September. Little is seen during the summer to indicate the show which comes regularly in early fall. Close inspection would have shown a thickening of the stems where the plumes were forming. But the speed with which they develop once they emerge from the protective sheath is really amazing.

This plant has the botanical name of Cortaderia but was formerly classified as Gynerium and is found thus listed in older reference books.

As can be seen around the Greater Victoria area, Pampas-grass can be grown in almost any garden with almost any soil. Only the hardest of winters that we have will cut the plants to soil level and only a stiff wet clay will rot away the roots.

In a light soil, plentiful humus is needed to hold moisture during summer. Growth will be rapid in a sunny situation and flowering plumes may be seen the first fall after planting. A shaded or half shady spot in the garden prevents the flowering.

When planting, use rotted compost or old manure in the soil mixture, and after a year or two in the garden give top dressings of the same sort of material. Occasional deep soakings are needed during summer for the roots to be able to obtain nutrients from the soil.

Once a favorite specimen for lawn decoration, it is no longer possible to plant Pampas-grass in a lawn where feeding and chemical weeding of the grass is a routine of summer care for no plant will escape harm from this treatment. On a high spot, or at a point of ground isolated from a mixture of other foliages, this grass attracts attention for several weeks each year. A three-foot evergreen shrub planted in front hides the brown leaves in winter.

The silvery plumes are useful in very large rooms for decorating a wide wall space. A floor vase with five or six-foot stems firmly fixed with rocks as anchors will give a fine effect against a dark buff wall or panel.

There is a period of perfection during which to cut the plumes for indoors.

Watch for the day when the plumes have fully expanded from the sheath and then cut the stems at the desired length. In most gardens, this week will likely be the right time this year.

If cut too soon, the plumes will be thin and poor in appearance; if left too long, they will be ready to shed their seeds when brought into the dry air of the home.

The seeds, being very light, are carried into every cranny of upholstered furniture and into rugs, and need strong vacuum suction to remove.

Don't put the stems into water, they will soften and start rotting. A dry vase, or stone jar or something similar is suitable. Large rock pieces or stones keep the stems in position.

Sometimes a slight pinky color is seen in the plumes of a pampas, and also a creamy white. These are known variations and can be bought occasionally locally but unless the grower has first-hand knowledge of the plants it is safer for the buyer to select while a plume is still in good condition.

If you want a Pampas-grass plant for your garden, look around now at nurseries and garden centres. Select a plant growing in a container and plant it this month. You will likely have a plume or two to watch grow and flower next year.

Soviets Spell It Out for Tourists

By THOMAS KENT

MOSCOW (AP) — Dangling cameras and lugging their souvenirs, 100 American college students filed expectantly into the Tchaikovsky Concert Hall in downtown Moscow. Three Soviet men and a woman sat quietly on the stage with fat briefcases, ready for the debate.

Four times a week in the ornate hall on Gorky Street, the Soviet Union lays its ideology on the line in question-and-answer sessions with hundreds of foreign visitors.

"Please don't put before us the task, in two hours, to make you Communists," one of the men on the stage told the Americans with a smile. He spoke English slowly. He paused and looked over the audience.

"But we are here to answer your questions. I dare to say, that about no country has there been so much misinformation, so much disinformation, as about our country."

No topic is barred at these sessions. The Soviet panels expect and get—challenged about dissident authors, human rights and all aspects of life here.

The Soviets see their job as giving the tourists, who sign up voluntarily for "meetings with representatives of the Soviet public," first-hand information they claim they can't get elsewhere. The Westerners usually are fascinated if not convinced by what they hear.

The American students, who shared the session with English and Australian tourists, started as most groups do with harmless questions. A young man wanted to know how many years' training a Soviet lawyer gets. (Five years of education after high school.) A woman asked if military service was compulsory. (Yes. Two years minimum for all men.)

Occasionally, there was laughter. One panelist ended a long answer with the remark, "Now, to finish up with this piece of Communist propaganda. . . ."

But as the session went on, the Soviet political expert, television commentator, professor and trade-union representative on the Soviet panel kept asking for "harder questions." Soon, the mood changed.

An Englishman wanted to know if churches are free to operate in the Soviet Union which is avowedly atheistic. He had heard, he said, that the state restricted them.

"We have all the world's churches represented here," responded Leonid Zolotorevsky, the television commentator. "Even if you want to be a Communist party member, no one would ask you if you are a believer or not, although it would be assumed that you are not."

Zolotorevsky said nothing about problems faced by many churchgoers, who complain about the difficulty of finding religious literature and other materials.

Churchgoers also claim that a political career is more difficult for a believer than a non-believer.

The panelist acknowledged housing, food and consumer goods shortages in the Soviet Union. But on ideological questions, they firmly supported Soviet policy.

"You say the Soviet Union is developing more every day," called a student from one side of the auditorium. "How long will it be before you can envision a free media and free circles of writers here?"

The answer, from a woman professor at the Moscow Institute of Foreign languages, was simple: "Media is controlled in every country."

At this, a few cries of protest went around the room. They mounted when the professor explained, in answer to a question, why the works of dissident, exiled Nobel prize-winning author Alexander Solzhenitsyn aren't published here.

"There are certain books that would not be published in this country because they are slanderous, because they distort the goals and aspirations of society," she said calmly.

She said there was no reason to devote the efforts of publicly-owned state publishing houses, not to mention money and stocks of paper, to publishing "nonsense."

Farmers Quiz SC on Priorities

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture plans to meet the provincial government soon to find out where agriculture is on the Social Credit administration's list of priorities.

Federation president Ralph Barichello said in an interview today he is waiting for a phone call from Premier Bill Bennett's office setting a date for the meeting.

He said it would likely be later this month or early in November. Barichello said the federation wants to find out if the government feels the industry is worth saving.

"Or are we to be left to wallow as events will determine?" he asked.

He said the federation will be quizzing the premier and hopefully other cabinet ministers on promises their party made during the Dec. 11 provincial election.

Specifically, he said, the federation wants to know whether the government will act on its promise to remove land taxes from farm property.

He said the previous NDP government promised the same thing and never acted on it.

"We want to know if this government will do the same thing and whether this is what politics is all about."

He said the federation, which represents 10,500 farmers, is in favor of keeping the B.C. Land Commission but wants to make some changes to the Land Commission Act.

He wouldn't elaborate on what these proposed changes were.

Barichello also said the federation is anxious to have its own agriculture minister rather than have Don Phillips serve in that capacity as well as hold down the economic development portfolio.

He said Phillips is a very capable man but he is too busy and his unavailability is causing some dissension among agricultural groups.

Premier Bennett indicated some time ago that a separate agriculture minister would be appointed this fall and Barichello said he expects him to follow through on that pledge.

He said there has still been no agreement on the general rates for the various income assurance plans.

BBC Films Loggers

A British Broadcasting Corporation television documentary crew will film loggers participating in logging sports at the Sooke River flats on Saturday.

Jenny Cropper, BBC assistant producer, said the English crew will film the sports as part of "Logging in B.C." — one segment of a series scheduled for showing in Britain and several other countries.

The filming will start at 2 p.m. and the public is invited to watch the loggers and camera crews in action.

40 CB Channels

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of channels available to citizens' band radio users will be expanded to 40 from 22 next April 1, the communications department said today.

The department also said in a statement it will impose stricter technical standards for the popular radio equipment in an attempt to reduce interference with other broadcasting services and within the citizens' band spectrum.

The expansion duplicates action taken recently in the United States and follows what the departmemt described as an explosive growth in citizens' band radio use.

The equipment, made popular by U.S. truckers, now is being manufactured in 40-channel capacity. The expansion of available channels will enable users to choose equipment from the full North American market.

The statement said licensing of 40-channel equipment will begin April 1 and that 40-channel equipment will be accepted for testing after Jan. 1. Owners must obtain a federal licence costing $13.50 for three years. The equipment they purchase must meet federal technical standards.

Production-Line Mentality Blamed for British Woes

By LYN OWEN
Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Husbands who think it's a good thing for their wives to work but don't lift a domestic finger to support them, are an all too-familiar British phenomenon.

So, too, are the teen-agers stricken with unyouthful inertia, clueless about the future.

Now new research claims to pinpoint the source of the problem and with it the cause of Britain's economic decline.

It is not just a question of female oppression and overwork, but the way in which husbands' lives are ordered at home.

Dan Miller, Professor of Psychology at Brunel University, has just completed a survey of how a man's working life affects his family and personality.

The trouble, Miller finds, is British bureaucracy. He has compared the home life of workers organized along bureaucratic lines, in which work and responsibility are split into the smallest possible units — in mass production lines and large-scale offices — with those still working in the fast-disappearing traditional entrepreneurial fashion.

That doesn't just mean top-hatted capitalists, but professional craftsmen, workers in small shops and factories, the self-employed, and people in autonomous small departments of bigger outfits.

Bureaucrats do one small job in the big organization, controlled by a long chain of authority, and have no responsibility for, and remain ignorant of, the rest.

In interpreneurial jobs there is very little authority, and one or two people, at however low the level, handle up to 45 different functions and take responsibility for them all. Both types of job, says Miller, have powerful effects on the personality.

Even minding a laundromat demands the ability to take on a variety of different functions and observe when they need performing, and the initiative to see they are fulfilled — a degree of decision-making and autnomy.

But, says Miller, display this degree of independence and initiative in a bureaucratic set-up and you become a troublemaker. Workers in bureaucracies lern to subdue their independence and initiative and to keep themselves within narrow limitations, always deferring to authority, never muscling in on anyone else's department.

The bureaucratic man at home, says Miller, is as lacking in responsibility, preparedness to take on a variety of jobs, independence, and initiative, as his job has trained him to be. He is passive and does nothing. His area of specialization is the commuter run or the bus to the factory — everything else is in someone else's department, notably his wife's.

'He's learned not to think, not to be autonomous, not to make judgments, not to take the initiative, not to take on responsibility beyond his narrow span — and his wife typically says of him 'If you left it to him the kids would be running around without any shoes.' "

For this reason, says Miller, it's the gentle liberal bureaucratic types who don't lift a finger either to chance a light bulb, however egalitarian their views, and whose wives espouse women's rights.

It is the more masterful types produced by the entrepreneurial job structure who, though possibly less enlightened and more disagreeable people, consider it their job to share responsibilities and lend a hand, and take an interest in the children's education.

"I arrived," says Miller, "in one entrepreneur-style household to find the husband cooking spaghetti for dinner. He'd decided to cook three times a week to his wife's four — why should she shoulder the whole burden?"

Miller finds the enterpreneurs make better parents.

Theoretically, they may be less enlightened, but they are far more involved with their children, more certain and active when it comes to measure for their welfare, exericse more real control.

Bureaucrats are uncertain and vacillating — less involved, more remote, liable to defer to expertise or push the responsibility off.

Children of fathers from this type of work structure are far more likely to be disturbed."

The remote style of parenthood identified by Miller as induced by bureaucratic working characterizes British parents above all others, according to the American researchers Bronfendbrenner and Devereaux, who have compared parenting here with that of other nations.

Fathers in Britain "show less affection, offer less companionship, intervene less frequently in the lives of their children" than fathers in other countries, who "like their children more, and ally a greater degree of control and demand with a lot more support, affection and companionship."

British parents act more on the principle of quiet life, shutting the kids up and buying them off.

They are more indulgent, but less involved, disciplining more from adult theory or convenience than from identification with the needs of the children.

Parents Get Physically Ill Over Children

TORONTO (Special) — Communication between parents and their adolescent offspring have become so complicated and prone to breakdown that the family doctor may well see such breakdown in the form of illness in the parents and not know it.

That's why the modern family physician must know what Dr. Hugo Janssens of Antwerp calls the "basic mechanisms" of diagnosing the link between family communication and health breakdown.

If he doesn't know, says Dr. Janssens, the family doctor must be taught, both in medical school and after graduation in the framework of continuing medical education.

The professor of family medicine at the University of Antwerp told the 7th World Conference on Family Medicine here Tuesday physicians must become involved in family communication breakdown because it increasingly manifests itself in physical illness and thus becomes part of the medical history of the patient — if the doctor is skilled enough to find out.

Once having found out, the physician can devise a treatment plan which makes sense in that it effectively helps the patient recover from all aspects of his or her illness instead of merely treating the symptoms.

Such treatment could well involve the sociologist, social worker, psychologist and psychiatrist.

Breakdowns in the relationships between parents and adolescents have nothing to do with the natural sciences," said Dr. Janssens.

"Yet medicine must be involved, because the outcome is a medical problem and a human problem, which interrelate," said Janssens.

"The first and foremost task of the primary contact physician is to elicit the problem and focus on it."

MISSING SLOOP SPOTTED, SAFE

The British sloop Cinzano, reported overdue on a trip from the Hawaiian Islands earlier this week, has been spotted and is now on her way to Victoria.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman at CFB Esquimalt said today the 36-foot boat was sighted by the fisheries patrol vessel Laurier about 6 p.m. Tuesday off Sidney Inlet, north of Tofino on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The spokesman said it was Cinzano's first landfall since she left Hawaii on Aug. 30.

The three persons aboard are reported to be safe and well. They are John Thompson and Cathy Nelson of the United States and John Chatfield of Britain.

The fishing vessel Early Harvest, which ran aground in the Ross Bay area this spring, is again in trouble.

The centre spokesman said she developed engine trouble and broke down shortly after midnight today at Jordan River.

Unwed Fathers' Role Stressed

TORONTO (Special) — An Oakville, Ont., family physician has told general practitioners from 33 countries meeting here to forget about the older, handsome seducer leaving poor, innocent and pregnant girls in his wake once and for all.

He just doesn't exist in modern society any more, Dr. Grahame Owen, who teaches sexuality and contraception in Ontario high schools, told the 7th World Conference on Family Medicine Tuesday.

Nor does the young man sowing his wild oats "with the girl getting no more than she deserved."

Instead, there are long-standing, committed relationships in virtually all studied and documented cases of premarital pregnancies — but the unwed father is left out in the cold when it comes to deciding what to do with the baby, and shouldn't be.

Unwed fathers themselves are becoming increasingly restive about this, said Dr. Owen.

Fifty-six per cent of unwed fathers studied in Montreal four years ago had known their girlfriends more than eight months prior to the pregnancies, he said.

Referring to the unwed father as "the forgotten shadow," Dr. Owen said these fathers "are left in the doctor's waiting room, or in the car, ignored, often afraid and frequently angry at not having the opportunity to take part in the decision-making."

Home Visits Cut Heart Fatalities

TORONTO (Special) — Realizing that 40 per cent of heart attack victims die within four hours of the onset of symptoms, often before reaching hospital, a group of South African physicians have started an instant home visit service for their patients and cut fatalities to 23 per cent of new attacks.

Dr. J. H. Levenstein of Cape Town, told the 7th World Conference on Family Medicine here Tuesday that 129 doctors participated in the instant intervention project initiafly, interrupting whatever they were doing when a patient called in saying he or she had chest pains that could be the start of a heart attack.

Where physicians were unavailable because they performed surgery or were delivering babies, partners or colleagues in nearby offices would take the call, said Dr. Levenstein.

He said doctors participating in the project, which is now a regular part of their work, find they are called between two and 12 times a year.

Once in the patient's home, their treatment for the patient includes drugs to prevent cardiac arrythmia, which is a common direct cause of death "and a very silly way to die because of what we can do to prevent it," said Dr. evenstein.

During the documented study period for the project, Dr. Levenstein said 60 per cent of the patients who were given such drug coverage actually turned out to have had heart attacks and might have died for want of the medication.

No adverse side effects were noticed among the 40 per cent of patients who received drug therapy but had not suffered a heart attack.

WOSS LAKE ON JOB

CAMPBELL RIVER — Operations at Canadian Forest Products' Woss Lake forestry division were back to normal Tuesday after a two-day wildcat strike by 225 employees.

Some members of Local 1-71 of the International Woodworkers of America returned to work Monday afternoon and the normal shift was on the job Tuesday morning.

The workers walked off the job Friday after an emloyee was fired following an accident at the camp, 40 miles north of Gold River.

A union spokesman said the dispute was settled by an agreement to launch a grievance procedure on behalf of the fired employee.

23 YEARS TOTAL TWO YEARS JAIL

A 26-year-old man was sentenced in county court Tuesday to a total of just over 23 years but because Judge E. J. C. Stewart ruled the various sentences will be served concurrently, the net sentence was two years less one day.

"If it was not for the fact that you'd spent eight or nine months in custody, I think I'd have sent you to the penitentiary," he told Alain Joseph Rosaire LaForest, formerly of Montreal and Vancouver.

LaForest pleaded guilty to six counts of breaking and entering at Saanich Medical Dental Building last January and was sentenced to two years less one day on each count, but the sentences to run concurrently.

For another breaking and entering charge in Victoria and possession of housebreaking tools and a similar possession charge waived in from Vancouver, he received the same sentennce.

He also pleaded guilty to charges waived in from Quebec including possession of a firearm, attempted robbery, three breaches of recognizance, breaking and entering, and possession of housebreaking tools. He was sentenced to varying lengths, from 30 days to two years less one day, on these charges, but again they were made to run concurrently with all other charges.

Judge Stewart told LaForest there is "no question about it, you undertook to engage in a life of crime in which you were proficient in some aspects, except getting away. Your real occupation seems to be one of breaking and entering premises."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A higher court trial was ordered Tuesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge Harold Alder at the end of a lengthy preliminary hearing of a major narcotics charge against three persons.

James Bradley Bellefontaine, 22, of 425 Wilson, and Joanne Gareau, 19, and Patrick Joseph McLoughlin, 28, both of 1083 Redfern, were charged July 29 with conspiring between May 12 and July 21 in Victoria county to traffic in hashish.

Publicaton or broadcast of hearing details was prohibited by an order issued by Alder at the request of defence lawyers Peter Freeman, Scott Marshall and Derek Brindle.

On Monday, McLoughlin and Ms. Gareau were cleared by Judge F. S. Green during a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession July 21 in Victoria of hashish for the purpose of trafficking. Green discharged both at the end of the first part of the hearing, dealing with possession alone.

David Scott Thomson, 21, of 2783 Penelope, was cleared Tuesday of a three-count charge of possession May 6 in Colwood of marijuana, hashish and marijuana seeds when prosecutor Nicholas Lott entered a stay of proceedings.

On Monday, Thomson was one of two persons cleared through discharge by Judge D. K. McAdam following a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession May 6 in Colwood of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. McAdam ordered a higher-court trial for a third person facing the charge.

Joseph Bruce Podfigorny, 25, of 3175 Balfour, pleaded guilty to a charge of possesion of a small amount of marijuana Sept. 20 in Victoria but told Alder that "I don't think it's such a great offence ... it's not a narcotic, I don't think, it comes under the Food and Drug Act."

Alder explained Podfigorny was wrong — marijuana comes under the Narcotic Control Act — and, noting Podfigorny had a 1972 conviction for possession of heroin, levied a $200 fine for a second narcotics offence.

"I'm on welfare," said Podfigorny. "I'm unable to work 'cause I was sick from doing drugs."

Alder allowed him to pay the fine at $50 a month starting Nov. 15.

Alder said the only reason he would not send Dale Elliott Thompson, 32, of 1630 Pear, to jail was that "you lack business acumen rather than having criminal intent."

Thompson pleaded guilty Sept. 28 to a four-count Victoria charge of false pretences resulting from four worthless cheques cashed May 26 to June 17. He was fined a total of $800 and put on probation for three months with the sole condition of paying back the $135 total of the bad cheques.

"I don't think you are criminally oriented but you have been foolish," Alder told Thompson.

Douglas Eric Ostergard, 28, pleaded not guilty to a Colwood charge of escaping and being unlawfully at large March 20 from William Head. He also elected trial by county court judge on a Ganges charge of possession Aug. 16 of an unregistered restricted weapon, a pistol.

Alder set both the trial on the first charge and the preliminary hearing on the second for Dec. 29. Ostergard is serving a lengthy prison term on a narcotics matter and was arrested in August by Sidney RCMP after an off-duty Victoria constable spotted a suspect.

Gordon Arthur Lee, 53, of 1721 Quadra, chose trial in provincial court on a Victoria charge of unlawful possession of dynamite Sept. 14 and entered a plea of not guilty. His trial was put down by Alder for Feb. 4.

SPIRO'S TROUBLES NOT OVER YET

BALTIMORE — Former U.S. vice-president Spiro Agnew, whose three-year probation on an income tax evasion charge ends Sunday, faces two court actions filed this week.

Judge Roszel Thomsen will hear arguments Friday on a request from a New York lawyer that Agnew's probation be revoked because of alleged violations of federal law. In addition, Agnew and two associates were named Tuesday in a taxpayer's suit asking that the three repay money allegedly received as bribes during Agnew's tenure as the Chief Executive of Maryland before he attained federal office. Agnew was not available for comment on either matter.

THUNDER BAY — A man who found refuge in refuse found himself unceremoniously dumped in the city dump. Employees of a city garbage contracting firm picked up a large garbage container from a city hotel and transported it to the local garbage dump. Falling in the heap of food scraps, bottles and other garbage was the squirming body of an unidentified man. The man jumped up and ran off without a by-your-leave. Deputy police chief Tom Keep said that if the garbage truck had been a packer, the man "probaby would have been killed."

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. — The International Space Hall of Fame, containing the names of 35 space pioneers, was dedicate Tuesday as a permanent memorial of the "most important event of this century." The 80-foot building, in the foothills of the Sacramento mountains, houses exhibits and displays associated with man's achievements in space. Among original inductees were the late Russian Yuri Gargarin, the first man in space, and American Neil A. Armstrong, the first man on the moon.

MINNEAPOLIS — A retired machinist who gave the City of Minneapolis $5,050 says he did it because the city has been good to him and now it needs his help. Olaf Bornstad, 74, said that the city has been "so hard up they are talking about cutting policemen and firemen and trash collection and schools and parks." However, he was reluctant to discuss his donation further because people "would think I'm goofy."

MALIBU — A burglar broke into the home of Dennis Wilson, lead singer of the Beach Boys rock group, stealing a $25,000 diamond ring. Wilson's wife, Karen, told sheriff's deputies she found the ring missing from her jewellery box earlier this week.

LOS ANGELES — Tom Poston, 54, was sued Tuesday for divorce by his third wife, Wilma Kay, 32, ending eight years of marriage.

WASHINGTON — Bob Randall's pot plant was once seized by police, but he now has a legitimate supply — thanks to U.S. government approval of a new study of marijuana use in treating glaucoma. Randall, 28, was away from his home here last summer when police found his illegal marijuana plant sunning on a balcony. Seizure of the plant was of more than legal interest for Randall. He suffers from glaucoma, a progressive eye disease that has destroyed 90 per cent of his vision. No medication helps relieve his pain, except marijuana. In a burst of speed unusual in the U.S. government, the Food and Drug Administration, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the National Institute on Drug Abuse co-operated to, in effect, get a new and legitimate supply for Randall. The FDA said Tuesday it has approved a plan by Dr. John Merritt of Howard University Medical School to use marijuana to treat severe glaucoma cases. Randall will be among about 50 test subjects.

The FDA, anxious to avoid the appearance of giving unusual attention to the Randall case, said the Merritt study is the 16th new drug approval involving marijuana. But the agency's action, the spokesman said, "was among the more rapid approvals."

Deep Throat Slashed

MIAMI — Truth-in-packaging has hit the pornography business.

A Miami theatre showing the X-rated films Deep Throat and The Devil in Miss Jones was fined for not telling the public portions of the movies had been deleted.

Asst. state attorney Kurt Marmar said some patrons complained to police they weren't getting their money's worth.

Marmar said the Pussycat Theatre cut the two films after Judge Thomas Testa ruled in 1973 that certain scenes were obscene. However, it did not advertise that the films had been trimmed.

Juliana To Stay

THE HAGUE — Queen Juliana has told reporters "I have never given a thought to abdication and I'm not yet giving it my mind."

The comment followed reports Juliana might step down because of husband Bernhard's involvement with Lockheed Aircraft and other "unacceptable" dealings.

Girl's Brain Kept Frozen

OAKLAND — The brain of a murdered 15-year-old girl is being deep frozen here at the request of her parents who hope that science will one day be able to reconstitute a person exactly like their daughter. The coroner's office said it agreed to the unusual step of turning over the brain of Patricia Wilson to a cryonic, or body-preserving organization, after receiving a written request from the parents.

WATERBED ROMANCE REALLY DAMPENED

RENO — A card dealer, who had her lover arrested for puncturing their waterbed, was recovering in a hospital Tuesday after being shot in the chest while working in a casino.

Security guards and Washoe County sheriff's deputies arrested the woman's friend, William Ramos, 24, in the Bonanza Square Casino for investigation of attempted murder.

Patricia Mowrey, 36, had Ramos arrested the previous day after their waterbed was cut with a kitchen knife. He was later released on his own recognizance.

Deputies said the man offered no resistance and gave security guards a pistol after the incident.

Guards Won't Walk Out

Although some members urged walking off the job, the majority agreed to await a reply from Andre Therrien, commissioner of penitentiaries, to 12 demands made by the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

Therrien has until Oct. 17 to reply to the demands.

The guards at the B.C. Penitentiary have expressed outrage at the agreement negotiated by prison authorities and prisoners to end the four-day siege and release a guard hostage during a riot resulting in $1.5 million damage last week at the maximum-security institution.

John Lakusta, president of the New Westminster local of the union which covers the prison, had warned of possible mass resignations by guards.

Union officials have called on the Canadian Penitentiary Service to renege on the negotiated agreement, saying it consolidates prisoners control of the prison, but officials in Ottawa and Vancouver have refused.

Spokesmen for federal prison guards in Ottawa said they believe a criminal conspiracy exists to destroy all penitentiaries in Canada.

They said the destruction of a 280-cell wing of Laval maximum-security prison north of Montreal has left the federal system with no cells in the Province of Quebec.

The simultaneous destruction of a wing of the B.C. penitentiary had forced authorities to transfer some prisoners from there to minimum-security prisons because of lack of other space.

Paul Gascon, executive director of the union that represents 7,000 prison employees, including 3,500 guards, said the guards, the penitentiaries service and the RCMP are aware that "or-

Thai Army Coup In Wake of Riot

Times News Services

BANGKOK — Thailand's military seized power today following a student-police battle which killed at least 12 persons, ending a three-year experiment in democracy with political arrests and a declaration of martial law.

Leaders of the coup dissolved Thailand's cabinet and parliament and abolished the constitution.

All newspapers were closed and police teams swept through newsrooms collecting "subversive" literature.

Admiral Sangad Chaloryoo, a former defence minister and supreme commander of the armed forces, placed himself in charge of the new administration and pledged "we will do everything ... to maintain the king, the throne, the country, democracy."

"All power and control will be in the hands of Admiral Sangad," another communique said.

One U.S. official in Bangkok said the United States would work toward good relations with the new regime, who said in an official announcement they will continue the foreign policy of the Seni administration.

"We don't feel it is our business to say what sort of government Thailand should have," the official said.

The takeover came eight hours after a bloody battle between leftist students and a rightist mob at Thammasat University in the heart of Bangkok.

The confrontation, touched off by the return to Thailand of exiled former military dictator Thanom Kittickachorn, erupted in a gunfight between students and police, who attacked with handguns, rifles and grenades.

Official police figures said 12 persons were killed and 180 injured, but unofficial estimates said at least three dozen persons died and hundreds were wounded.

The rightists, part of a mob of 10,000 that shouted "kill them all!" ripped one wounded student from the hands of police and beat him to death with their fists, feet and rifle butts.

Another student was hanged from a tree and at least five others were burned to death.

At least 700 students surrendered to police.

Bangkok was outwardly calm after Radio Thailand announced the coup following its regular 7 p.m. newscast.

LAUGHING GAS THEFT NO JOKE: POLICE

VANCOUVER (AP) — Police expressed concern Tuesday over the theft of 38 cylinders of nitrous oxide — commonly known as laughing gas — valued at $1,363 from a Union Carbide Canada Ltd. plant.

Because of the large quantity stolen, Vancouver police said there is a possibility the gas could be used in the execution of crime.

The 144 pounds of gas in the cylinder would expand to about 10,000 gallons under normal atmospheric pressure. The gass is sweet-smelling and colorless and if large doses are inhaled unconsciousness and even death could occur.

Union Carbide told police it did not sell nitrous oxide to private persons, only to hospitals, doctors and dentists where it is used in small quantities as an anaesthetic. It also can be used as a meat preservative. The slaughter houses must secure a licence to procure it.

Anti-Protest Ads Sabotage Suspected

Sabotage is suspected in the mysterious disappearance of some advertisements attacking labor's day of protest Oct. 14.

The ads from the 37,000-member Canadian Federation of Independent Business were sent out last Thursday to 20 Canadian daily newspapers but 14 of the papers didn't receive them.

"There is some kind of sabotage in the system," federation president John Bulloch said today from Toronto.

He said the ads, which describe the protest as "a sad day for democracy, an even sadder day for Canada," were sent out along with other material and only the anti-Oct. 14 material went missing.

Bulloch said he may hold a news conference Thursday to publicize the missing ads if the federation is able to find proof that they were deliberately misplaced.

The ads were prepared by the Toronto advertising firm of Brian Skinner Communications Ltd. and sent out by H and S Reliance, an engraving house.

Skinner said today the ads, which were sent to but apparenly not received at either the Times or Colonist, were hand delivered to Toronto daily papers and appeared today in the Globe and Mail and Toronto Star.

He said other material sent at the same time related to the federal anti-inflation board, Canada Savings Bonds and Tip Top Tailors arrived at the newspapers but the federation ads didn't.

"We suspect industrial sabotage," he said.

New ads were sent out Tuesday night, he said. The original were mailed Thursday and should have arrived by Saturday at the latest, he added.

The federation advertisement shows the Canadian flag flying at half-mast against a black background and appeals to Canadians to go to work as usual Oct. 14.

"Are we to be governed by law or by the wishes of a few union leaders," the ad asks. "The vote will be counted Oct. 14."

Bulloch, who said it cost $35,000 to circulate the ad, accused labor leaders of using "big-lie techniques" to protest their cause.

Bulloch said the majority of Canadians support the federal wage and price controls.

He said the federation recently completed a survey of the federation's members which showed that 60 per cent of the companies favor the controls, 37 per cent are against and three per cent are uncommitted.

He said 36,000 companies were polled and 8,000 ballots returned.

QUAKE KILLS SIX

QUITO (Reuter) — Thousands of villagers in central Ecuador spent the night in the streets after a string of earth tremors killed at least six people.

In the past 24 hours 28 tremors have been recorded in the region. Some measured five or six on the 12-point Mercalli scale.

Officials said six bodies had been found in the districts of Pasto Calle and Toacaso in the southern province of Cotopaxi, about 50 miles from here.

They said about 90 per cent of the houses in both districts had been destroyed and rescue teams were digging through the debris for more victims.

Most of the tremors occured during the day when most people were working in the fields.

In Yugoslavia, three earth tremors shook the Vlandovo area Tuesday night but caused no casualties or damage, seismologists said today.

Postal Strikes Spread As Injunction Sought

Times News Service

Members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) expanded their series of illegal work stoppages over technological change late Tuesday by walking out in both St. John's, Nfld., and London, Ont.

The move by the inside postal workers followed two 24-hour wildcat walkouts and was the first time in this round of disruptions CUPW members went on strike at two post offices the same day.

Also late Tuesday, national union officials in Ottawa were served with a legal writ barring them from taking part in any illegal work stoppages.

Joe Davidson, president of the 23,000-member union, declined comment about the writs, saying: "I'm the wrong man to ask about anything. . . Our benevolent employer has served us with papers."

The writs prevent the union executive from co-ordinating the job action byy the 23,000 members.

In Vancouver, a judge of the British Columbia Supreme Court adjourned until today a hearing on a federal application for an interim injunction against picketing by the CUPW local.

Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais, who met with union leaders in Ottawa Tuesday, had warned CUPW earlier that the government intended to seek the injunction to prevent further walkouts there.

CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot said the Ottawa meeting was held "to clarify the situation" about the contentious technological change clause in the current collective agreement.

"The postmaster-general is a new postmaster-general and he was given wrong information from both sides. . . . There was a need for some clarification," Mr. Parrot said.

He said, however, that no further meetings were scheduled and the walkouts were continuing.

The latest bout of post office trouble in the long-standing dispute erupted Friday when union leaders issued a strike call to CUPW workers after walking out of a meeting with top post office officials. The meeting had been a last-ditch attempt to iron out the problem of technological change.

Fund Crisis Hits UVic Music Dept.

A funding crisis that threatens the future of the University of Victoria's music department will be aired tonight by UVic president Dr. Howard Petch.

Dr. Petch will outline the situation — which a university spokesman says has triggered "tremendous concern" within the department — at a senate meeting.

UVic officials have been told that the Universities Council of B.C., the government-appointed body that distributes funds to B.C. public universities, has recommended that UVic receive a minor amount of funds compared to B.C.'s two other public universities.

The government money was to have been spent at UVic on construction of a new music building.

Unless the Universities Council can be persuaded to re-allocate the funding, UVic officials fear that some of the music department's faculty might leave for other posts.

Polyestermite Isn't Right; We're Victims of a Hoax

Own a fiberglass boat?

Worried about that dreaded marine organism called polyestermite?

You can breathe easy.

It turns out that news stories which appeared in early October in newspapers all across North America — last Friday's Times included — stating that polyestermites eat fiberglass, were unfounded.

And (shudder) it appears that the whole thing was a dreadful but cunning hoax.

Phones at the Times have been jangling since the article appeared. Everybody and his uncle out there who owns a fiberglass boat was justifiably concerned that the polyestermite would gobble up their floating real estate.

The whole thing started in Sail, circulation 150,000, and considered one of North America's best and most reputable boating magazines.

Sail carried a detailed and lengthy article under a staff writer byline outlining the growth of the polyestermite and its ability to consume fiberglass.

The story was picked up by newspapers and other media, triggering an avalanche of calls.

Local physician Dr. Hugh Macartney alerted the Times that the whole thing was a hoax, the polystermite having been an invention of British yachtsman Bill Beavis in 1970.

"The original was a classic British leg-pull," the doctor reported. "The polyestermite had nippers on each end so he could simultaneously eat two boats rafted together."

Beavis owns up to his invention in the February edition of the British magazine, Yachting Monthly.

"Every now and then over the past six years this Frankenstein thing comes back to haunt me," he writes.

Patience Wales, Sail's managing editor in Boston, admitted Tuesday he has been submerged with calls from anxious boaters and boat dealers.

While not going into detail (the impression was the magazine had been conned), she said there would be an explanation in a future issue.

But for those subscribers of Sail in Canada, the United States and overseas who have no other way of checking, it will be a long wait.

Wales said the explanation will be too late to make the November issue but will appear in December.

In any event, it appears that fiberglass boats are A-OK.

At this stage of the game, we're just sorry we ever heard of the pesky bug, polyestermite.

So would you please stop bugging us?

Kepone Polluter Fined $13.2M

Times News Services

RICHMOND Va. — A judge, who said he wanted to deliver a warning to every corporation in the U.S., Tuesday fined the Allied Chemical Corp. $13.2 million for secretly discharging Kepone and other chemical wastes into Virginia's James River.

"I hope that after this sentencing every corporate officer will think 'if I don't do anything (about pollution) I will be out of a job,' Judge Robert Merhige said in setting the maximum fine allowed by the law.

No "commercial products are as important as our environment."

In imposing the fine, believed to be the largest ever levied in a federal pollution case, Merhige noted a federal rule that allows him to change the sentence later. He might lift part of the Allied fine if the corporation makes any "voluntary" effort to alleviate any of the suffering that has resulted from the contamination of the lower James River with Kepone, he said.

Just hours before sentencing Allied, Merhige imposed a fine of $3.8 million on the tiny, defunct Life Science Products Co., which took over Kepone production for Allied in 1974 and made the white powdery pesticide for 18 months.

Russell train, director of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said "the large criminal fine . . . represents a landmark decision in the history of environmental protection."

"The court has clearly signalled that polluters will be held accountable to the full extent of the law," he said.

Contamination from Kepone has forced a fishing ban on the James River and now threatens the Chesapeake Bay, the biggest fish producer on the east coast.

About 30 chemical workers who were employed by the now defunct Hopewell firm that produced Kepone exclusively for Allied have been hospitalized with nervous disorders diagnosed as kepone poisoning.

7.9% PAY OFFER 'DISGUSTING'

Saanich Police Say No

Saanich policemen voted unanimously Tuesday night to reject the municipal police board's offer of a 7.91 per cent increase and to take their 1976 contract to binding arbitration, a spokesman said today.

Saaniich police association president Corporal Phil Jamieson said the offer would leave the Saanich force one of the five lowest paid west of Ontario.

Within hours of its submission, the 101-member association rejected it by a unanimous vote.

Although members were "absolutely disgusted" and disappointed, he said, they also rejected strike action and decided to seek arbitration.

The association has been without a contract since its last one, making Saanich one of the highest-paid police forces in the country, expired Dec. 31, 1975.

Jamieson said the association, which requested a 12 per cent increase last January, feels Saanich policemen must maintain their "historical relationship" with other forces.

There has been only one negotiating meeting with the municipality's represenatives in the past 10 months, he added.

Meanwhile, negotiations between the Victoria police board and the city's policemen's union — which appeared to be breaking down in recent weeks — have apparently taken a turn for the better.

Union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said today "heartening" progress has been made in the past week in talks with Mayor Mike Young, the chairman of the police board.

"We are still talking back and forth but I hope that in the next week or so we might have something to put to the men," he said.

Taxi Taken Over

An 18-year-old youth was to appear in provincial court today charged with theft of a cab in downtown Victoria.

Police said the Victoria Taxi cab was "forcibly taken" in the 600-block Yates at about 12:20 a.m. and was spotted by police at Douglas and Burnside.

An arrest was made after a 3½-mile chase.

Police said the taxi driver, Lee Wells, 30, of 1418 Harrison, had picked up a man at Cook and Pandora and was driving him downtown when the man, saying he had a knife in his boot, ordered Wells out of the cab.

Aldermen Adamant On Park

Times Staff

Residents fighting the expansion of the Royal Oak industrial park were told Tuesday night Saanich council won't back down on the controversial issue.

But they were assured careful planning will be done to make the pill they must swallow more palatable.

About 100 of them were at Glanford elementary school to tackle Saanich council members and Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board.

Saanich's request to have 79 acres lifted out of the Agricultural Land Reserve and used for industrial purposes, swelling the industrial complex to about 120 acres, has received approval in principle from the regional district.

Campbell told the residents the board is awaiting input from the other municipalities before changing the official regional plan to allow the 79 acres to be used for industrial purposes.

Campbell said it would be an "economic use of land", adding the acreage is "to expensive for agricultural purposes".

Dick Gauthier of the Royal Oak Concerned Citizens replied: "Developers and speculators have been purchasing this land for years. Speculators have bought and held off. These are the people who have put the price up."

But Ald Roy Wootten and Ald. John McDonald insisted the industrial park is needed to increase the tax base in Saanich.

"I am in favor of an industrial park. It should be properly planned and developed so it is not an eyesore," Wootten said.

Even back in the time of former mayor Hugh Curtis, now municipal affairs minister, Saanich was planning an industrial park in Royal Oak, McDonald said. (Curtis was invited to the meeting but didn't attend.)

"We're going to do the best we can for the people in this area, still recognizing the needs of the municipality as a whole," McDonald promised, "If you have no confidence in council then change council. That's your prerogative."

Mayor Ed Lum said: "The need for servicing in the Greater Victoria area demanded we should have something of this size. Council will have full control of anything that goes in."

Gauthier asked if council will ignore the wishes of 503 taxpayers who had signed questionnaires opposing the industrial park.

One woman reminded aldermen that royal Oak was promised a recreation facility in election campaigning two years ago.

"Are these all the parks we're supposed to have . . . an industrial park. It sure seems like it in this area," a man observed.

Wootten said council is negotiating for property in the area that would provide a large park.

He asked Lum to confirm this.

"The land we are negotiating will be large enough to put on a recreational facility," Lum answered.

Lawrence Cook, the groups's chairman, said residents will continue to press for a compromise.

"We don't want to have to take the whole darned thing (industrial park)," he told Campbell and council members.

'No-No Zone' Knocked

William Head peninsula would be a better site for a camp for under-priviledged children than as a prison, a Seattle engineer has told the Capital Region Board.

Wolf Bauer said using the land for a prison has created what he called a forbidding no-no zone".

"It would seem that such a scenic and adaptable shore resource might be better utilized with public taxes for an under-privileged children's camp, for example, than a habitat for a segment of that adult element for which such surroundings represent anything but a deterrent experience."

Bauer made the comments in a report on shore-resource study he carried out this summer of the marine shoreline between Wolf Island and Fort Rodd Hill.

His report, commissioned by the board earlier this year, was presented to the CRD zoning and planning committee this afternoon.

Bauer called the 48 miles of peninsula shoreline "a shore-resource of the first order for the province."

His report points out the need to establish management goals for four areas in particular—Parry Bay drift sector, Royal Bay drift sector, Witty's Lagoon and Esquimalt Lagoon.

Bauer said shoreland property owners should be asked to assume stewardship over the preservation of beaches and shorefront.

In exchange, he suggested, they might receive compensatoon in the form of tax relief or some other benefit.

How's That? 17.5 Cents For Coffee?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The average price for a cup of coffee in Victoria is 30 cents but you can pay 40 cents, 17.5 cents or nothisg at all.

The free coffee, like most prices, is a bit misleading.

It is at the Empress Hotel dining room and you have to buy a full meal to qualify for it.

The first cup of coffee costs from 20 cents at the fast food shops to 40 cents or mroe at the expensive restaurants.

However, few customers order only one cup, and that's what confuses the pricing structure.

For example, Hy's Steak House charges 40 cents for the first cup of coffee but a refill is free. That's 40 cents for two cups.

By contrast, low price coffee shops downtown charge only 25 cent for the first cup but some charge 20 cents for the refill. That's 45 cents for two cups, or a nickel more than at Hy's.

The 17.5 cents a cup is at the Harbour Towers Raven's Dining Room and really comes in the form of two cups for 35 cents.

And the two cups come in Supermug, a special container used to serve coffee in the 7 a.m. to noon period.

From lunchtime on, the regular sized cup is used, again at 35 cents a cup but with unlimited free refills.

The Supermug is practical as well as bargain-priced.

"Most people want a second cup of coffee in the morning and they get both cups in one mug," says waitress Joyce Schoor.

"It saves the waitresses a lot of time. One serving does the job. Occasionally a man will ask for a refill on the large mug. People drink a lot of coffee in the morning."

Over 67 per cent of the day's coffee sales are completed by lunch time.

"After lunch, coffee drinking seems to taper off. That's when we use the smaller cups," she said.

And, contrary to Victoria's international image almost nobody orders tea any more. Tea sales account for only about five per cent of the hot beverages sold during the day.

In the middle was Coffee Macks, which charges only 30 cents for the first cup but refills are a dime. Meanwhile, some places charging 35 cents for the first cup offered free refills, reducing the two-cup price to 35 cents.

The survey showed that coffee machine beverages are no bargain for heavy drinkers. At 20 cents a cup, the price is 60 cents for three.

By contrast, three cups of coffee at the Garden Cafe in The Empress would cost only 30 cents because of free refills.

Students, Dog Owners Swell Coffers

A team of seven students contributed $5,100 to Saanich coffers this summer through the collection of overdue dog licence fees.

Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton told the finance, legislative and health committee Tuesday the students had collected a record $7,860 in fees, 35 per cent of that ($2,751) being paid to the students as commissions.

Because of the municipal lockout no figures are available for 1975 but in 1974 $2,140 was collected, $1,391 being realized after commissions were paid.

The success of this year's canvass is credited to the students' enthusiasm and the lack of other jobs in the Greater Victoria area for students.

The committee agreed to hold a similar canvass in

Corporal Sentenced to Year As Lawyer's Leniency Plea Fails

The second of two men involved in mess fund frauds at CFB Esquimalt was dismissed from the armed forces and sentenced to a year in jail Tuesday following his court martial trial.

Cpl. Michael Dalrymple, 30, was found guilty of five charges — stealing and fraud of $255, obtaining liquor by fraud and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline by improper use of bar privilege — all laid under the National Defence Act.

The court rose shortly after 3.30 and within a few minutes provost officers arrived to escort him to confinement. He will serve his sentence in military detention at Edmonton.

Kirby and the other two members of the board — Lt.-Cmdr. R. F. Archer, HMCS Funday, and Lieut. W. J. E. Fredericks, HMCS Mackenzie — found Dalrymple not guilty of three charges: conspiracy to defraud and improper posssion of public property.

Proceedings were stayed on four alternative charges.

During the three-day trial evidence was given by Cpl. Robert Ganner, 32, ex-mess president, who was found guilty of 12 charges and sentenced last week to four years imprisonment with dismissal from the forces.

After giving evidence Ganner was admitted under guard to Naden Hospital for observation, apparently suffering nervous collapse under the stress of his week-long trial and personal upset.

Speaking to senethce, Dalrymple's lawyer Alan Bigelow reminded the court of the corporal's clean conduct sheet and good service record, and pointed out he had recently been married.

"Now I want you to think about the Ganner case," Bigelow said. 'Ganner was the heavy."

He said a jail sentence "will not serve the communiy, the service or the accused," and asked that Dalrymple be made to repay the money. He suggested punishment of a reduction in rank, severe reprimand and a fine "certainly would meet the ends of justice."

Dalrymple could have been sentenced to a maximum two years in jail upon conviction by the disciplinary court martial. Ganner was tried by a general court martial with five officers deliberating.

On Oct. 19 two more men are scheduled to appear before a court martial board involving the junior mess inquiry. They are former serviceman Craig Campbell and M-Cpl. Adolph Plewa, who were mess managers at Club 44.

Saanich Pays Stadium Bill

Saanich's finance, legislative and health committee Tuesday approved payment of the municipality's share toward the 1976-1977 operating costs of the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium.

Saanich's share of the $47,865 to be paid by the four core municipalities is $9,300.

School District 61 also contributes toward operating cost on a usage basis.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What are the current life expectancy figures for Canadian men and women? How do these figures compare with those in the United States, Great Britain, France and Germany? J.W.

A. According to the most recent available figures, The World Almanac and Book of Facts 1976, quotes the United Nations Demographic Year Book of 1974 which states the life expectancy for Canadian adults is 68.75 years. In the U.S. it's 67.1, in Britain, 67.81; France, 68.5; East Germany, 68.85, and West Germany, 67.41. The figures are not broken down into the two sexes.

New Indian Art Better: Carver

"Actually only the works of a few old craftsmen can compare with the carvings and silver works of our native artists today," he said.

Richard, often called upon to make replicas of old carvings for the Provincial Museum, said the average craftsman of the 19th and the first half of the 20th century made things hurriedly to be used at the moment.

"If he made a mistake or didn't quite complete a carving, no one was really concersed."

As an example, he showed a 75-year-old mask exceedingly well done but for the eyelashes which had been left unfinished.

"No person calling himself an artist would get away with a mask like this today . . . he would lose face," he said. "Today he works to develop his own style and to surpass the old masters."

Richard represents the third generation of carvers at Thunderbord Park belonging to the same family.

He stepped into the shoes of his father, Henry Hunt, recognized as one of the province's great totem pole carvers, and now retired. Henry had succeeded Chief Mungo Martin, who did much to revive native arts and crafts. He was Richard's grandfather.

Richard comes from a family of 13 children and started to carve when he was 15.

"I watched my father and then tried my hand at it," he recalled. "Then one day my mother, Helen, said I would no longer get an allowance. I would have to earn my pocket money by making carvings and selling them. So after school, five days a week, I worked at my craft."

While Richard is well known in Victoria for his exquisite masks, he admits he has much to learn about the arts and crafts of his people.

"I have only made one small totem pole by myself," he said. "All the others I made with my father when I was his assistant at the park."

"The big test will come when I'm asked to carve a big totem pole. I'm sure I can do it, but it will take years before I can become as skilled as my father."

In keeping with the Hunt tradition, Richard said his younger brother Stanley has started to carve. Then of course there is Tony Hunt, the eldest, already a well established artist in Victoria; Alec, also a carver, and a sister, Norees, a designer.

"I don't have to look for outside competition," he said. "There's plenty within the family."

It's Like This . . . Or Is It?

Ignore that last word on the subject. It's going to be farewell to annual elections in the city of Victoria, and a welcome to the biennial vote . . . or is it?

City council has changed its mind so many times on the issue it's getting to be confusing, and no one could say with any certainty that an apparent change of heart at Tuesday's caucus meeting was indeed that.

But it now seems council intends to rescind the motion it passed last week, which authorized maintenance of the status quo: continuing the present system of annual elections in which half the council is elected each year.

Instead, at next week's formal council meeting a resolution will be presented proposing that candidates elected in next month's civic elections serve for one year only. This would enable adoption of the biennial system in November, 1977, when the electorate would be asked to return a full slate of mayor and eight aldermen.

The only council member still vehemently opposed to the switch on Tuesday was Ald. Bob Ellis, who predicted that biennial elections would foist party politics on Victoria.

Council would find itself "divided into government and opposition," he warned, with all matters being decided along strict party lines instead of aldermen voting according to their individual beliefs and consciences.
